Quote of The Month – “Yes, you did. Yes, you had zombies. But this is “Zombie Redneck Torture Family,” see? They’re entirely separate species.” - (Sitterson in “The Cabin in the Woods”)

Welcome to Eternal Sunshine, the zine for people who search multiple streaming services and can’t find a single thing they want to watch. That seems to be what happens nearly every time I look through new additions. I spend a lot more time watching my DVDs, or perhaps whatever happens to be on TCM. I’m wondering if it is time to cancel Netflix and Shudder (but Shudder is only like $7 a month so it’s worth keeping).

My birthday is late in October (the date is none of your business, just pick one). Send me presents. And money. And find me a beautiful girlfriend. You have your orders, go forth and carry them out.

In terms of the zine, I am strongly leaning towards closing things up when the new game of By Popular Demand ends. That would mean I will cancel the Diplomacy opening and offer no new games. I’ve already told Andy York, this, although I will also continue to produce the zine until all of Andy’s games are done even if that runs a few issues past my last game. I may change my mind in the next few months, but I don’t believe I will.

I guess that’s it from me for now. See you in November!

Game Openings

Diplomacy (Black Press): Signed up: Kevin Wilson, Gavin Begbie, Rick Davis, Graham Wilson, Paul Milewski, need two more to start. Still deciding if I’ll run this, should it fill soon.

By Popular Demand: Ongoing. Join in and play NOW!

Where in the World is Kendo Nagasaki?: Ongoing. Join in and play NOW!

Also in Andy York’s Subzine – You can find his ongoing “Hangman, By Definition” and Facts in Five, plus openings for Breaking Away and Gunboat.

Standby List: HELP! I need standby players! – Current standby list: Andy York, Andy Lischett, Paul Milewski, Harold Reynolds, Jack McHugh, Brad Wilson, Graham Wilson.

Meet Me in Montauk The Eternal Sunshine Letter Column

Mark Nelson: My laptop is currently with faculty IT as it needs fixing, so I am using my wife's desktop. This has no problem downloading the PDF from your email.

Something that I have wondered about is what happens if your car sinks. In the pre-electric day you could attempt to manually wind down a side window. (I seem to vaguely recall seeing a car safety video that went through the procedure. Were you supposed to open the window slightly, then wait until there was a certain amount of water inside the vehicle before trying to open the door?) But cars no longer have the facility to manually wind down a side window So what happens since i assume the electrics will no longer work?

[[There are a number of "emergency devices" made to be kept in the glove box. The multi-function ones have (along with things like a flashlight and maybe a strobe-type light) a sharp metal point on the back. These are designed to be used with blunt force on a window in the case of flooding or submersion to crack/smash the window. In general, if the car is submerged in deep water, there will be too much pressure to open the door.]]

Returning to Dr Who. Pertwee was my first Doctor and therefore my favourite. I watched the whole of the Tom Baker era and remember Peter Davidson being the Doctor - at that time he was more famous for being in All Creatures Great and Small. But somewhere along the line I stopped watching Dr Who. I don't think I saw either of Colin Baker or Sylvester McCoy. What about my favourite assistant? Katy Manning started in 1971, so I must have seen many episodes featuring her. Her final story - The Green Death - is one that has remained vivid in my memory and indeed I've bought it on DVD. (The ecological story line was ahead of its time). However, my favourite of the Doctor's assistants from the original run is Elizabeth Sladen.

[[I loved Sarah, she was my favorite as well. I probably thought Leela was more attractive as a 13-year-old, but in retrospect Sarah - often with Harry to accompany her - was my favorite.]]

I know that there are no wrong answers in BPD. Still, I would contend that if you buy "cream of mushroom soup" you are not buying a vegetable in a tin. You are buying a soup. Sweetcorn is, however, a good answer. Now that I think about it, that is the vegetable that I buy the most often in a tin. If a recipe calls for sweetcorn kernels it's just easier to buy them in a tin rather than to buy a corn. HOWEVER, does Dr google count is an authoritative source? According to Dr Google sweetcorn is only considered a vegetable is you eat it off the cob. If the kernels are not attached to the cob when you eat them then it is considered a grain. In which case, sweetcorn in a can is not a vegetable...

[[The only authority is whoever is doing the cooking.]]

I did really enjoy Happiness when it was initially released and I saw it at the movies. I did once start to watch it on DVD (with the ex who liked the creamed mushrooms in a tin) and she insisted that we turn it off at a certain point. Yeah, not so sure that I could watch it again.

[[Happiness has often been referred to as "the best movie you will never want to watch again." It's not an easy, relaxing time. I generally only watch it every five years. Welcome to the Dollhouse, his prior film, is also bluntly downbeat and a film I watch only every two or three years.]]

Brad Wilson: Regarding tinned vegetables: Artichokes would be one I use often. They are tasty, and much less work.

For some dishes, canned potatoes are useful, and, when prepared well, tasty.

Corn (except when on cob) I buy frozen and defrost. Creamed corn is a canned veggie I'd use occasionally.

Wax beans are hard to find any other way but canned. Not ideal, but I like them, tossed with lemon juice and pepper.

[[Wax beans? Being forced to eat them as a kid, just heated on the stove...ugh, never again.]]

The Dining Dead – Eternal Sunshine Movie Reviews

Extraordinary Tales (Shudder) – A 2013 animated collection of Edgar Allan Poe tales. I have a strange feeling that I started watching this years ago, on Netflix or something, and for whatever reason stopped it in the first few minutes. I vaguely remember seeing the crow (representing Poe) flying around the animated graveyard, talking to Death (in the form of a statue over a grave). Or perhaps I saw that in a trailer, and never got around to starting it? Anyway, the stories are Poe, obviously, and the animation varies but some of the styles are interesting (especially the Breccia-inspired Tell Tale Heart animation). The hook that got me to watch this was one of the stories is narrated by Bela Lugosi (probably an old radio narration), and another is by Christopher Lee. The other two narrators are Julian Sands and Guillermo Del Toro. For the upcoming Halloween season, you could do a lot worse than some classic Poe tales. But if you're not a fan of Poe, there's no real reason to watch this.

Scare Campaign (Amazon) – A 2016 Australian horror/comedy written and directed by Colin and Cameron Cairnes (leaning a bit more on the suspense/horror side of the scale). A TV show called "Scare Campaign" does spooky, over-the-top pranks to unsuspecting "stooges" for ratings and fame. But the network begins to pressure them when the guerrilla internet group "Masked Freaks" begins to make a name for themselves with actual murder. The network wants to see the envelope really pushed, and "Scare Campaign" has one last chance or face cancellation. I don't know it is about these Aussie films. Even the lower budget and independent ones seem to find actors who can actually act, making the ride more enjoyable. It's not perfect, and a couple of the twists are telegraphed long in advance. But perhaps that's intentional; the filmmakers may want us to have a good idea what's going on without blatantly spelling it all out. I was pleasantly surprised by this one.

Older Movies Watched (that I've seen many times) – Running on Empty, The Cabin in the Woods, The Descent, Blair Witch (2016).

Out of the WAY #49

Howdy!

First off, a BIG request for those of you who sometimes send in orders at the last minute, in November the deadline is, as usual, on a Wednesday. The next day starts Millenniumcon which'll be my first gaming convention since the start of the Covid Era (my last was OwlCon in Houston the first weekend of that March – just under the wire with the first cases in Houston being identified just a couple days after the con concluded). I'll be playing in six games (mix of boardgames, miniatures and RPGs) and GMing two – Merchant of Venus (original TAHGC version) and Suburbia. It's a great con and I'm looking forward to relaxing and enjoying it.

But that means I need to have the subzine completed by mid-day on Thursday (first game session is that evening). Anything you can do to get orders in a bit early would be very much appreciated. Also, as a head's up, I'll be flying out the following Tuesday for a week's visit to Michigan (family related). So, any orders that'll come in will likely be delayed in acknowledging until I return just before Thanksgiving.

In other zine news, with Doug contemplating running the zine down, I'm not sure that starting new games is the best idea. I've some idea when this might end from Doug, and I'm pretty sure it'll at least be around until the BPD game finishes, so I'll do a last call for my game openings and see where things are at next issue. As always, standbys are always welcome at any time – especially as one of the ones for Gunboat is joining the game.

Regarding the baseball season, the AAA Express ended up with a 79-71 record, unfortunately only winning 2 of 3 games against Sugar Land in the last series. It was a good season, lots of good players/plays and an enjoyable time with the Express staff and other regular attendees of the game that I've gotten to know. I've already renewed my tickets for next year – March 31 is the first game!

One neat thing the Express did, for those that renewed early, was host a bus trip to see a game in Arlington against the Guardians (the Rangers lost...). As part of the excursion, we had early admission and access to the field for batting practice, but it was the Guardian's day and they were more attuned to fielding practice than batting. A couple of the former Express players came over to chat and sign autographs. We couldn't get the attention of one of the Guardians who also played at Round Rock (when it was the Astros AAA team). The new head honcho for the Rangers, Chris Young, also came over for a brief chat with the group.

As we left that, the Rangers upgraded our planned seating to an available suite – pretty snazzy. As it was a last minute decision, there was no food service included. But, there was plenty of time to explore the new field and find a place to buy something to your taste (I had a nice bratwurst and, later, a hot dog – I skipped the alligator corn dog and brisket egg rolls added this year). It was nice to go see a game and not have to drive that distance, especially as we returned a bit before midnight – long day! But, well worth the time spent with folks in the Express family (both fans and staff).

I thought I'd wrapped up commenting on Austin weather, but have two notes to add to what I wrote last time. I'd mentioned we ended up 3rd in the most 100-degree days in Austin history. Well, three additional days in September brought us into the 2nd spot. Also, I noted that the long dry spell was broken by rain that was falling early in the month. However, since then not a drop – as I recall the weather forecaster stated we were around 28 days without rain again – VERY odd weather patterns over the past few years.

Mini-Book Reviews

(finished since last issue)

Lefty by Verona Gomez and Lawrence Goldstone (2012; 393p).

The bio of Lefty Gomez by his daughter is a touching look into the life, experiences and relationships of this early/mid-20th Century pitcher. In his 14-seasons in the MLB, for all but the last few games, he pitched solely for the Yankees, so was a teammate with many of that team's greats in the 30s and 40s, forming lasting friendships with many of them, The book is sprinkled with anecdotes about these players, and some of those he faced from the pitching mound.

As can be expected, the book opens with his early years living in very rural California and his attempts to break into baseball while in high school. Overcoming a series of obstacles and hurdles, he finally was signed. Then, he worked his way up the minor leagues of the time, giving insight into how players were managed and treated at the time.

Once making it into the major leagues, he has a successful career as a pitcher, though not so much as a batter. Afterwards, he had a lengthy stint as a baseball equipment rep and as an Ambassador for baseball around the country. He also was a fan's player, constantly answering questions, signing autographs and just chatting about baseball, even to those who knocked on his door.

The book also looks into some of the low points in his life, including a very rough patch with his wife early in his career and his fight with alcoholism in his post-baseball life. It is a touching book with an insightful look into the baseball scene of the Depression and early WWII years.

That said, it wasn't one of the best biographies I've read. I don't know if it was the writing style or something else. Definitely a book to read if you're interested in his career or that time of baseball history. For the casual reader, I'd probably skip. [September 2022]

Off the Map: The Curious Histories of Place-Names by Derek Nelson (1997; 200p).

A look into the history of map making, why decisions are made to include/exclude material and how maps are used to influence the folks that use them. It certainly opened my eyes, as I've always pretty much accepted what is in a map is what is reality (at least with maps in my lifetime, early maps with "Here be Dragons" or depicting an unexplored region obviously must be taken with some skepticism).

Two current examples that should have given me some of the same reflection on maps, but didn't until I read the book. One is the situation with Crimea. Maps sold in Russia, and in the Russian sphere of influence, show that as part of Russia while most Western produced maps don't, or show it as disputed territory. Ditto with maps in China regarding Taiwan.

A relatively short read, it was definitely worth it and has changed my perspective when reading a map. Recommended. [September 2022]

Lords and Ladies by Terry Pratchett (1992; 375p).

The first book in the Discworld series that has a disclaimer from Pratchett at the beginning. He basically says that the previous books could be read and enjoyed as stand-alone books, however this is the first one that is enhanced by reading the previous ones. Many characters from a couple previous volumes make a return and the plot is almost a sequel to previous stories. So, do read the others (at least those with the primary characters) if you want to fully enjoy the book.

Basically the witches, having completed the journey described in Witches Abroad, return to their hometown and Kingdom that was first visited in the Wyrd Sisters. There is going to be a royal wedding, including invited guests from some other stories that were set in the city of Ankh-Morpork that take a central role in this book.

Meanwhile, while the witches were away, some others took up the mystical arts on their own. In doing so, some taboos are broken and another weakening of the walls between worlds happens. This could allow the Lords and Ladies (elves) access to Discworld and, if so, evil things could happen.

Regarding the story, I found the first half of the book a bit tedious and slow to develop (and I would expect someone without some investment in the overall series arc, would find it even more so). However, once this story is set up, the back half of the book gallops along at a frenetic pace that you almost don't want to put down.
Recommended for the Discworld fan, but it isn't the book to start the series with as you may not find it as captivating as if you eased into it. [September 2022]

Hangman, By Definition

See Rule Change in bold below

This is a five-round game, with each round consisting of a variable number of turns. The winner will be the person who wins the most rounds, with a tie breaker being fewest total number of turns in those winning rounds. Second tie breaker will be the greatest number of letters guessed (by total count revealed, not by individual letter).

Each round will consist of identifying a word of at least six letters. Along with each word will be the first definition given. All words and definitions will be identified by blank spaces. Words and definitions are verified in a dictionary that was my high school graduation gift (slight hint to those who might want to find the edition).

The goal is to guess the word in as few turns as possible. Each turn, all players will submit up to three different letters to be revealed. The letter submitted by the most players will be the letter revealed in the next turn. Ties will be broken by a randomized method. Additionally, each player should submit a guess for the word. Once the word is correctly identified (spelling is important), that round will end and a new round will begin. All players who guess the word in the same turn will share in the win for the round. If the word is not guessed by the end of six turns with no letter being revealed, no one will win the round.

Along with revealing letters in the word, letters will be revealed in the definition. There are no bonus points for guessing any part of the definition, it is only there to help players figure out the word. No guesses about parts of the definition will be confirmed or displayed except by the letter revealed in that round. The letters “E” and “S” can never be chosen as the letter to be revealed.

Game 2, Round One, Turn 2:

Letter Votes: New Word is printed below

Solution:

Word: _ _ _ _ _ (9)

Definition: _ _ _ _ _ (10) _ _ (2) _ _ _ _ _ (6) _ _ (2)
_ _ _ _ _ (5)

Never Revealed: E, S Already Revealed: None Yet

Game Words Correctly Guessed: Metamorphosis (Firth, Maslen, Smith, Wilson)

+++++

FACTS IN FIVE

Rules: There will be five rounds, the cumulative high score at the end of the fifth round will be the winner. Anyone may join anytime with a starting score matching the lowest total from the previous round. Anyone missing a round will add the lowest score of that round.

Each round will consist of five categories and five letters. Each player submit may an entry for each category which has a key word that starts with each of the letters (twenty-five total entries). Key words are generally the first word; however, articles (the, a, etc.) and modifiers (“red” in red bicycle for “R” in “mode of transportation” or “general” in General Lee for “G” in “Military Leaders”) are not key words. A word in the category may not be the key word (“bank” in “Bank of America” for “B” in the category “Banks”). For given names, the last name is the key word, if married it will be their post-marriage last name. However, in the case of commonly used stage names, that name should be used (in a category of female singers, “Q” could be “Queen Latifa” and “Cher” for “C”). An entry may only be used once per round. Please clearly identify which individual you are using as your answer if there are multiple potential people with a given name. For instance, if the category is American Presidents, answering Washington is fine as there is only one; however, if you decided to use Bush you need to indicate whether you are submitting the father or the son. Unclear answers will be matched to score the least points. Using the Bush example, if one person submitted “Bush” and three people submit “George W. Bush” the latter would score 2 points and the former 1.

One point will be scored for each entry that unarguably meets the letter and category. An additional point will be added if anyone else also uses the same valid entry for the same category. Maximum possible score in a round is 50 with a lowest possible score of 25, presuming an individual submits a valid entry for each category and letter in that round.

Research is allowed, collaboration between players is not.

Game Six, Round One

Bolded - Scores 2 points for matching another entry; Crossed Out - scores 0 points; otherwise scores 1 point.

REMINDER - Last names are generally the key word, not first names.

Notes on Kevin's Answers: CA Arthur is Charles Arthur Floyd aka Pretty Boy Floyd;

General Player Comments:

[Kevin Wilson] – A question occurs to me. For the non-fiction writer, should they be exclusively non-fiction? For example, Orwell did write fiction but also non-fiction. [WAY] – In general, you should choose answers that you think others would put in the category for maximum scoring, so that should self-correct for those on the margins.

From my perspective, I can't give a definitive answer as it'll be more case by case – mostly based on whether they are known as a fiction writer or is it an aside/footnote. As a non-binding example, one short fiction story published in a fanzine in a body of work over 45 years as an investigative journalist, likely no (though some may contend that investigative journalism, in some cases, is no different than fiction). Same journalist with a handful of stories, some published professionally, with a Hugo nomination, likely yes.

Deadline for Turn 8 is November 12th at 7am My Time

By Popular Demand

The goal is to pick something that fits the category and will be the "most popular" answer. You score points based on the number of entries that match yours. For example, if the category is "Cats" and the responses were 7 for Persian, 3 for Calico and 1 for Siamese, everyone who said Persian would get 7 points, Calico 3 and the lone Siamese would score 1 point. The cumulative total over 10 rounds will determine the overall winner. Anyone may enter at any point, starting with an equivalent point total of the lowest cumulative score from the previous round. If a person misses a round, they'll receive the minimum score from the round added to their cumulative total. In each round you may specify one of your answers as your Joker answer. Your score for this answer will be doubled. In other words, if you apply your Joker to category 3 on a given turn, and 4 other people give the same answer as you, you get 10 points instead of 5. Players who fail to submit a Joker for any specific turn will have their Joker automatically applied to the first category. And, if you want to submit some commentary with your answers, feel free to. The game will consist of 10 rounds. The score for Round 10 is doubled.

Turn 2 Categories:

1. One of the Seven Wonders of the World.
2. Another word for "heavy."
3. An acronym for part of the U.S. government.
4. Something associated with Halloween.
5. A Cary Grant movie.

Joker category shown in BOLD. Most popular answer shown in the bottom row.

Player	Seven Wonders	Heavy	Acronym	Halloween	Cary Grant Film	Turn	Total
Kevin Wilson	Great Pyramid of Giza	Massive	FBI	Candy	North By Northwest	35	62
Andy York	Great Pyramid of Giza	Massive	DOD	Pumpkin	North By Northwest	37	57
John David Galt	Great Pyramid of Giza	Massive	FBI	Pumpkin	North By Northwest	38	56
Carol Kay	Grand Canyon	Massive	FBI	Pumpkin	The Philadelphia Story	27	54
Jack McHugh	Great Pyramid of Giza	Massive	NASA	Pumpkin	North By Northwest	38	53
Brad Wilson	Hanging Gardens of Babylon	Weighty	FBI	Pumpkin	The Philadelphia Story	27	48

David Burgess	Great Pyramid of Giza	Fat	CIA	Ghost	North By Northwest	29	35
Paul Milewski	Great Pyramid of Giza	Weighty	NASA	Jack-o-Lanterns	To Catch a Thief	25	31
Melinda Holley	Great Pyramid of Giza	Overweight	FBI	Witches	The Philadelphia Story	23	29
MOST POPULAR	Great Pyramid of Giza	Massive	FBI	Pumpkin	North By Northwest

John David Galt and Jack McHugh earned the top score of 38 this round (out of a possible 41). Andy Lischett and Richard Smith get the low score of 18.

Comments by Category:

One of the Seven Wonders of the World: Kevin Wilson – "It will be interesting to see if the 7 Wonders goes with modern or ancient wonders. But, as we're all game players, I figure it will be the ancient version and the Pyramids seems the most likely of those." [[I was very surprised how little variety there was in the answers.]]

Another word for "heavy": Kevin Wilson – "It will be interesting to see which usage of "heavy" draws the most synonyms. I went with the adjective as that came to mind first but there were more synonyms for other usages of the word." Andy Lischett – "My first choice for "Heavy" was "Far out, man", but "deep" is better." [[I was surprised how many people took it to mean a person's weight. I meant it more the way you took it.]]

An acronym for part of the U.S. government: Kevin Wilson – "So many to choose from. Given the amount of coverage in the news right now, SCOTUS and FBI seem to be the most likely but others that came to mind: CIA, FDA, SEC, EPA, NASA, ATF, FEMA, FTC, FAA.” Richard Smith – “I think I chose the CIA as I’ve just been watching the cracking BBC thriller, The Capture (series 2), about the use of deep fakes in intelligence. Ron Pearlman of Hellboy and Sons of Anarchy fame plays a senior CIA operative who ... [curtailed to avoid spoilers].”

Something associated with Halloween: Kevin Wilson – “Again, so many: Jack-o-Lanterns, ghosts, witches, black cats but for most, candy is simple.”

A Cary Grant movie: Kevin Wilson – “Once again, many to choose from. I’m more of a fan of his romantic comedies or romances but the Hitchcock film was memorable and sort of reignited his career. The scenes on Mount Rushmore and the plane in the field are easy to come to mind so that’s my choice. It will be interesting to know what your choice would be were you playing, being a film buff.” [[My favorite Cary Grant is North by Northwest, but Charade gets a close second (also being a film I saw before I ever saw NBNW, and the first film I bought myself on VHS). For BPD it would have probably been North by Northwest.]] Andy Lischett – “Both Cary Grant movies are groovy.” Walt O’Hara – “Edging out the Philadelphia Story.” Brad Wilson – “My favorite Grant film is North by Northwest, but I think Philadelphia Story (which I like too) will get more support.”

General Comments: None.
