FROM THE WIZARD'S MOUTH:

I'm afraid that I am indeed going to be forced to fold. I started working on this issue about the 20th of September and here it is past the middle of October and I still don't know when I'll get a chance to bring this to the printers. The strain on my time is incredible. I just don't have enough spare time to put out a decent zine. For a while I considered going warehouse, but I wouldn't be pleased putting out a half-assed product. So I'm going to take a more-than-brief hiatus. If a time comes that I once again feel that I can put out a good magazine, I'll consider restarting the zine. I doubt that that will be anywhere in the foreseeable future.

This was not an easy decision to make, I thought it over for quite a while and I feel that this is the best thing to do. I enjoyed publishing a great deal, I got a lot out of it. I feel that it was an invaluable learning experience and I really do hope to restart again at some point. I won't be leaving the hobby entirely, though I will be maintaining a much lower profile. Most of my games are over or close to completion, but I will still be receiving a few zines. You may see a letter from me from time to time. There were nine "I's" in this paragraph.

To all my subscribers, you should find a check included with this issue, for the amount of credit you had left in your subscription. If you have any problems with what I think your refund should be, please feel free to write or call me and we'll work something out.

As for my games, Dick Martin is helping me to place them, and you should all have new homes by December or January. For now, he has agreed to continue the games until he can find volunteers to finish them. So send your next set of orders to him (26 Orchard Way N, Rockville, MD, 20854). I can't thank you enough Dick. As for the 3 variant games, we're going to have to put y'all on hold until someone can be found who is willing to run them. Any volunteers? For now, I'll print the current positions and player's addresses. My thanks to the players for sticking it out.

So here we are at the third anniversary issue. I'm afraid this is hardly going to be a special issue though. I have so much work and so many new obligations, I really don't have time to put out a good annish.

College is going well. I've got a relatively large schedule this semester--16 credits. My courses are Calc I, Philosophical Classics, Intro to Psychology, Occidental Civilization prior to 1650, and a Humanities course called the Nature of Narrative. My favorite is Philosophy followed by Occ Civ. We're studying Kant currently, and we get into some interesting discussions at times.

I also like this campus a lot. You can't really tell that you are in a city most of the time, but if you're ever bored, it's close by. I went to see to see The Orioles play the Yankees, and I also went to a Jethro Tull concert in October.

The people here are really great too. My roommate and I get along fine (though I haven't introduced him to Dip yet). The great thing about this place (and I'm sure this is going to sound incredibly snobby) is that most of the people understand what you are saying and are able to make interesting contributions to whatever is being discussed. We talk about philosophy a lot for example, and I take great pleasure in participating in these discussions.

So much for chat, let me leave y'all with a few words of wisdom: Please, please, please try and remember that this is just a god-damned hobby. I know you've all heard that before, why not try and follow it? The personal garbage that was being flung around during the last few months really disgusted me. But it was more than these last few months, if it's not one feud, it's another. Some of the people in this hobby never ceased to amaze me. There is no 'power' in this hobby. Those people who think they have power are only kidding themselves and might do well to seek professional counseling, because they must have problems differentiating between the real world and fantasy. There were many people who did tremendous good for the hobby, even if they did on occasion get side-tracked and I'd like to mention them and extend my thanks: John Caruso, Bruce Linsey, Rod Walker, Kathy Byrne, Dick Martin, Fred Davis, Larry Perry, John Boardman, Mark Berch and Gary Coughlan. I'm sure there are others who deserve to be mentioned, I'm sorry if I forgot your name, whoever you are.

I think the last decade has shown that it is well-nigh impossible to 'organize' the hobby. I wish I could give some kind of advice as to how we might go about organizing the hobby, but like I said, I don't think it can be done. Ratings are nice, but they're not worth the hassle. Who the hell cares whether E-Mail games should get Boardman Numbers? We're supposed to be having fun and I don't see many people having fun arguing about this topic.

I final word about Anduin: I think I was able to do a great deal with the zine in the last three years. I started small and I'm ending small. The zine has come full circle, but the editor has gone up an $x=y^2$ curve. I thank you, one and all, for being a part of that climb.

Read-list: Am I busy? Well, here's what I've been 'browsing through' lately: The Epic Of Gilgamesh--Authour Unknown; The Illiad--Homer; The Peloponnesian War--Thucydides; The Satyricon--Petronius; The History of The Franks--Gregory of Tours; The Maltese Falcon--Dashiell Hammett; The Big Sleep--Raymond Chandler; Five Dialogues--Plato; An Enquiry Concerning Human Understanding--David Hume; Philosophical Writings--Rene Descartes; Prolegomena to any Future Metaphysics--Immanuel Kant; Ficciones--Jorge Luis Borges; Kafka, The Complete Stories--Franz Kafka; Selected Short Stories--Anton Chekhov. Rod Walker take note! I've also read selected parts of the Bible since I've been here for my Occ. Civ. class!
