

Atlantis

This is a short issue of ATLANTIS, a journal of postal Diplomacy, regular and variant. Editor and publisher: Christopher Schleicher, 1535 Dartmouth Lane, Deerfield, Illinois, 60015.

*

The postal strike is still being felt in some parts of the country, even here in far-off Deerfield. Ever since the strike ended, mail has not gotten through the Deerfield Post Office. A small blizzard during the past week has not helped the situation any.

I have not been getting regular delivery of mail during the past week. I am afraid that some of my mail has been "lost" in transit.

Therefore, all deadlines for all games are re-set to 14 April 1970. All players in the New York area are asked to send in moves again, as I have not received any mail from the New York area since around 14 March.

*

The regular Diplomacy game R-2 has 3 openings left in it. Game fees for this game are $4.00 ($2.50 for NFFF GB or IFW members). $1.00 off if you are already playing in an ATLANTIS game.

*

Contest #1 results: My odometer was 100,968.3. The closest person was Larry Peery with a guess of 84,599; second was George Patton with 130,000 miles. Both are invited to join the R-2 game free, if they wish.

*

Imperialism XV has generated some interest. I will therefore open up one game starting immediately. The game fees for this game only will be $5.00, $4.00 for members of the NFFF GB and/or IFW. No discount for current players. This game, because of its complexity, will have deadlines of 3 week, and may be carried by a separate magazine (sub-zine of ATLANTIS).

Any questions or comments welcome. Maps and rules for Imp XV will (I hope) be included with ATLANTIS #20.

*

Subscribers have had their subscriptions extended 1 issue -- I won't be counting this as a full issue.

*