Anderson Wins COLONIAL DIPLOMACY!

Anderson's Duch completed a successful stab of G Wilson's French to end our second COLONIAL DIP offering. Just as the Turk's were beginning to get momentum, too.

This will leave a page open, hopefully for another DIP or COL DIP. Sign up soonest to start a game in January or even December. Our 1830 game should finish next time, and WIZARD'S QUEST could well end in Turn 6 since two players are but one attack away from their third treasure. MAHARAJA is almost in it's final turn and barring both leaders flipping, CIRCUS MAXIMUS will finish in two turns. Even "Kurzon Dax" the current STELLAR CONQUEST game, is but 2.5 turns from finishing, so the start of 2007 will bring sweeping changes to our line-up.

IMMEDIATE GAME OPENINGS:

18xx: New game should start soon. Apply soonest.

BORIS'S BULLETIN BOARD

THOUGHT FOR THE MONTH: "Diplomacy and defense are not substitutes for one another. Either alone would fail." --- John F. Kennedy

NEW ON THE WEBSITES: The transcript for "Artemis Gordon" has been move to the "Finished" folder. The Hall of Fame page has been updated

PICTURE OF THE MONTH: The second of two birthday cakes at the Chattanooga Railgame Challenge last January. Send ptx! I'm getting desperate here.

We've (finally) updated Mikes Scott's address and phone number.

It's nearly time to join the Boardgame Players Association for 2007 and vote for the new additions to the 100 main tournaments and 25 trial tourneys. My WIZARD'S QUEST tourney missed the cut in 2006 by just a couple of places, so if you do join, I'd appreciate your vote.

BOOS & KUDOS

The Madame Bolduc Press Excellence Award (and free issue) goes this month to Jack Shacklett for his press in "Boris XVIII".

This month's Ms Nar Super-Sudsy Bomb is lobbed at Graham Wilson for an NMR that gave away the game.

PERSONAL COMMUNICATION HERE (maybe):

Deadline for most games is 1800 CST 1 DEC 06

ERRATA: It seems I deleted Mr Haffey from my e-mail list when he resigned, but forgot to reinstate him when he unresigned. This is a bit uncharacteristic since I've kept folks on the e-mail list for months after their snail-mail subscriptions and active game(s) were over. Anyway, if the GM doesn't send you the results, it's his fault that you don't make the deadline. So, we redo Spring 1907.

CLIFFHOME: The German advance into France has dimmed hopes of French survival, although the end may not be swift depending on if Italy deigns to intercede and on which side. Nor are British prospects any brighter if the Kaiser and Tsar can coordinate even a little. And coordinate they must on the Eastern Front with the Turks on the verge of a major breakout.

CLASSIFIEDS

My Dear Tsar,

Of course you will get your share of the Balkans and the late Austro-Hungarian empire. I merely need to take a trip to the Baltic as I promised my third wife's second daughter on the event of her second marriage so her and her second husband can have a nice honeymoon. She does get sea-sick so I had to decline Italy's gracious offer to travel there on their wonderful iron gondolas. Germany is in such an uproar over the 22nd Teutonic Tuba Tooting Tournament that we must detour through Warsaw. I am sure your aristocratic breeding and fine sensibilities can appreciate the delicate nature of the trip. After the trip is complete I will return any minor acquisitions that may have occurred on the way there.

Your servant,

Sultan Jack

MIRKWOOD: The civil unrest in Indo-China -- no doubt fomented by Dutch agents has handed hegemony over to King David. And just in time as the Sultan's forces were gaining momentum. Britain was unable to hold on to the finish. The Russians showed remarkable resiliency and admirable survival skills. The Japanese were stalemated to the south by the Dutch and never could break into the Chinese wall of coastal armies. But would the Dutch have prevailed to 24 centers?

Players normally bid on a card by its numeric rank. For example, the Guild bids four Spice for the first through third cards, two Spice for the fourth and fifth cards, and attempts to outbid all other players for the sixth card. The Atreides player must bid by referring to a specific card (for example: "Bid 5 Spice on the Lasgun, and 2 Spice on each Poison weapon"). The Atreides player may bestow his special bidding advantage to other players (see above for alliances) in his faction.

Bids which are illegal at their time of execution are automatically canceled. This occurs whenever a player does not have sufficient spice to meet his bid, or has a full hand.

Note: if a player has acquired Family Atomics or Weather Control, and intends to play it, he must notify the GM a turn ahead in order to warn him of possible adjustments. For the next two turns, the GM will set a deadline for the player to notify him of whether the option will be exercised. Normally this will be the same day in which battleplans are due. The player may make play of the card conditional upon combat results, if he so desires. Otherwise, this due date should be approximately nine days after the postmark on the GM adjudication of combat. If not exercised, the player loses the option to utilize the card until the GM is again informed of its potential.

Note: Karama cards are played normally during movement or combat. The player may make the play or the Karama card conditional upon the actions of other players. (For example: The Guild Player states, "I will play my Karama if, and only if, the Emperor attempts to ship to Tusk's Satch.") displayed above.

We pause for a moment to take an audit to see whether the game is over or not. My quick and dirty audit indicates it might be. If so, Prof Hanna's spreadsheet indicates that Bailey wins by $89, however, Erie would then have paid dividends, giving the Prof $352 more in cash and $108 in share value, easily putting him in the lead. Due next: SR 11 and ORs 11 to finish the game.

--PBM DUNE System (continued from p 15) aid positions or stop another faction. This restriction also brings the Guild and Freemen endgame advantages into play more often.

Should there be no combats to be resolved, play proceeds to the next turn's movement. If there are combats to resolve, the GM must set a short-term deadline by which time players must submit battleplans. After receiving these, he gives another report to the players, including all the following:

- 1) Combat results;
- 2) Collection round results;
- 3) A listing of all player's current spice holdings;
- 4) The number of cards up for bid next bid round;
- 5) A listing of final board positions; and
- 6) Any secret information due the Atreides

Should there be no combats, the information listed above (except item 1) should be included along with his movement report to the players.

Modifications for Postal Play

It is somewhat axiomatic that play by mail will require some slight adjustments to the game rules. These have been kept to a minimum. The following are the comprehensive rule changes; unless otherwise noted, all rules remain in force.

VII. Spice Blow

When a worm appears, any alliances must be declared by the next movement deadline. Players may submit only one alliance choice; if players of a proposed alliance list identical alliance choices, the alliance is considered formally formed. (Example: Emperor proposes a E/BG alliance; Bene Gesserit proposes a BG/E alliance. The GM would then notify the players that such an alliance does in fact exist. However, if the Emperor had proposed a E/BG/H coalition, no alliance would have been formed since the Bene Gesserit did not list the Harkonnen. Too, since the Harkonnen player did not bother to submit any alliance proposal, the diplomacy of the Emperor would fail.)

When worms appear, if the Freemen are able to take an action as a result, the Freemen player must inform the GM of such actions in his next set of movement orders.

VIII. Bidding Round

Bidding is done simultaneously. Players may make their bids conditional upon the results of prior bids, but must try to be as clear as possible as to their intent. The GM is not responsible for problems caused due to a set of ambiguous orders. Players may specify that they will attempt to outbid a specific faction(s), where upon he will pay one more spice than the highest bid. Should two or more players attempt to outbid each other, the player with the most spice pays the amount necessary to outbid everyone else trying to outbid him (ties broken by a random number). Each bid goes to the highest bidder; ties are passed to the faction with the most spice in hand (further ties are resolved by are resolved by random number).

DUNE

PBM System, Pt 3

X. Battles

If there are any combats, the GM will notify any players involved of the deadline by which battleplans are due. Players should list the number dialed, amount of spice payed, leader(s) and any attack/defence card(s). Players with "Karama" or "Truthtrance" cards and/or special combat advantages must inform the GM of the actions or questions to be made, and how these will affect their battleplans. A player may automatically use any character advantages he enjoys, along with any gained through an alliance.

If there is more than one battle to be resolved, the GM will determine the order in which battles are to be fought by random number. This will resolve any difficulties arising from one player being involved in more than one combat in a turn.

For PBM DUNE, the aggressor is termed as the player who occupied the battle site first. Tokens present at the beginning of the turn are given first Priority, and are always considered the aggressor if involved in combat. (Note that if the BG player comes out of a state of co-existence, the other player is the aggressor if the BG occupied that territory with that power and was previously in coexistence.) Tokens which were shipped to the battle site have second priority, followed by tokens which moved there by planetary movement. Ties in the lowest priority are resolved in favor of the faction moving the least number of spaces to arrive there. (All other ties are resolved by random number.)

If there are more than two opposing sides occupying a territory, combat must be continued until there is only one faction left, as per the combat rules. All occupants of the contested territory must submit combat orders; the aggressor must also state which player he wishes to fight first. The remaining players submit battleplans in case he is chosen to fight first. The GM will appoint appropriate deadlines for each battle to be fought.

If the Guild chooses to move before everybody else, he is automatically the aggressor. On the other hand, if he chooses to move after all other players, then all other factions are the aggressor when facing his tokens in combat.

Players must state if they will not call treachery into play if a leader in their pay appears in the battle. The GM will assume they will unless otherwise instructed and take all appropriate measures.

Missing a battle turn: should a player fail to submit a battleplan by the decided deadline, he is assumed to have dialed a number equal to his token value minus one-half, zero spice, sent in his weakest leader (or a cheap hero/heroine if available) and utilized no treachery cards.

XII. Alliances

Players may automatically utilize any advantages gained from their ally (Example: in a BG/Guild alliance, BG troops ship at half rates and the Guild troops may "voice" their opponents.) In the case of the Harkonnen's power, "treachery" will always be called when an Harkonnen ally meets one of the Harkonnen's traitors in battle.

It is strongly suggested that alliances not be allowed to win. It is this player's opinion that alliance wins in DUNE are against the spirit of the game, although they can be formed temporarily to

STELLAR CONQUEST

Kurzon Dax: Awaiting orders for Turn 42 combat and revisions to Turns 43-44 movement. Be thorough with your orders. The game ends after Turn 44 combat so a little mistake here can obliterate 40-some turns of good play.
