(London) The Triple Alliance remains firm. While Germany fights off the Russian hordes, Britain comes to the rescue! The army in the frozen North supports the German effort. An expeditionary force has gone to Belgium to support France in her hour of need. The Royal Marines have landed in Marseilles and the fleet is protecting Spain. Units of the demoralized French forces have landed in Wales for further trading.

(Paris) Local officials are happy to announce the annihilation of a somewhat cocky English rowboat in Brest with delusions of grandeur. "Having told there should be to the Russians, the English will find they have no hope of winning the war, and will actually be annihilated unless they turn back to the balance of power stand they took at the beginning of the war!", said one high official. "The Russians just look for excuses to attack!" He went on to say, "Why, just last month they claimed they 'heard' we were to take Belgium when we had told no one that! If they aren't stopped soon, (even by Turkey's help) we all might as well start learning Russian!" England & Italy my offer still holds, now or never!!!

(London) In a rare jovial mood the Admiralty announced its amusement over the French concern of English garbage scows at Brest. Meanwhile Parliament has extended an invitation to Kaiser Vielmann to set up a government in exile in Borneo. The quarters previously set aside for the late emperor of Austria are still available and the Kaiser was cautioned that if he did not accept the invitation surely "that Lehto guy down in the boot surely would." Meanwhile the Admiralty's 'soda cracker' strategem has been put into full swing with, "France shuffling troops between Burgundy, Brest & Picardy, leaving the underbelly exposed. Only the Lord, or King Greg Nelson, knows what will happen when the French fleets are destroyed this year."

(Constantinople to St.Pete) Oh Bernie, what a gift! Thanks alot, I appreciate it, but Rumania too! I only expected Bulgaria.

(Constantinople to Venice) I'm sure you understand my change in moves. They were a bit rash, weren't they.
