London -- RAT's: Every minute our position grows stronger. We offer you an honorable surrender: present governments can continue, and we will retreat within our own border. However, you must pay relief for the families of our deceased and there must be a reduction of military power to assure future peace.

Moscow -- Tsar Alexis, addressing the newly elected Duma of 1877, denounced the Western powers for their "foul war of aggression" and warned them "that the judgment of the Lord will strike them down in the West even as it struck them down in the East". ##### It is assumed that the Tsar was speaking of the massive defeats inflicted on the British and French Far East Fleets in the battle of the Japan Sea, and the siege of Vladivostok. News of the latter had just reached Moscow the previous day: The British Expeditionary Force, driven from Siberia by Allied armies, lay siege to Vladivostok, with the aid of what remained of the Far East Fleets. It was feared in Kiev (interim capital of the Russias) that the city was lost, but news came yesterday that relief forces under General Alanski Huffovitch had lifted the siege, forcing withdrawal of the British by sea to Japan. ##### "We look toward the future not with fear, although fearsome are our enemies, not with trepidation, although our situation is dangerous, but with the faith that the right cause -- our cause -- will win in the end."

There were high-placed officials in the Empire, in fact, who urged this course. We hope that our good-will will be reciprocated. By the way, you could always help me give you those rating points -- like support me against Russia?

Propaganda --

A-H -- Italy: Fritz, please move your army back into Venice this turn because if you don't I will have to take it by force.

A-H -- Russia: Sorry about that!

London -- Constantinople (in exile): Well, Margaret, baby, "honey chile", you blew it again. Your temper tantrum against my ally, France, fools no one. The "Sick Man" of Europe isn't getting any better. You Moslems seem to be in a run of bad luck lately. I'll be looking forward to playing you in C.N.

London (Dec. 30) -- News Flash: It has been discovered by a secret agent based in Berlin that Russia has solved a major problem (other than having too many supply centers). Instead of sending all its idiots to Siberia, where they would be of no use, they have exported them to Italy for school teachers. This is a good move for Russia, since it seems that a demoralized Italian army, led by their inglorious Fascist beast, has unfortunately started a conflict against two vastly superior (and far more intelligent) nations, France and Austria-Hungary.

London -- General Statement: It seems that the Czarist bigots will have to remove two inferior units; this shall save the English and Austro-Hungarian governments money in cleansing the world of the Moslem and Slavic blight. (My thanks to my friendly, neighborhood racist, Alan Foyt, for some of this month's propaganda.)
