The "Golden Rules of DIPLOPHOBIA --

The GM is doing all he can to keep the games moving and help the players get as much enjoyment out of them as possible. But his success at doing so ultimately rests upon the shoulders of the players themselves. Without their cooperation, the efforts of the GM are doomed to failure. Following are a few things you, as players, can do to help the GM do a better job of serving you:

1. Don't be a "drop-out" -- stick it out, no matter how bad your position. Drop-outs cause the GM mucho extra work, and often spoil the game for the other players.
2. If you must drop out, at least have the courtesy to give the GM advance notice, and to continue playing for another move or two, if necessary, to give the GM time to locate a replacement. This will ensure a more orderly transition, and won't disrupt the game as much as now so often happens.
3. If you enter a game as a replacement player, stick it out to the end. There's nothing more frustrating to the GM and disruptive to a game than a replacement player who himself has to be replaced.
4. Try not to miss moves. Missed moves generally slow down a game, and hurt the other players as well as the move-misser.
5. Get your moves in on time, or even a day or two before the deadline. The earlier all the moves are in, the earlier the GM can publish the 'zine.
6. Write clearly, and use a separate piece of paper for each game. If you must list all games on one sheet of paper, at least write on only one side of the paper. You'd be surprised how much time this would save the GM -- and how many GM errors it would help to eliminate.
7. Obey the House-Rules, particularly where move-writing is concerned. Don't abbreviate; and be sure to write a separate and complete order for each unit.
8. Go easy on the propaganda. Space is at a premium in a 10-page magazine, and we'd rather have you limit your own propaganda, instead of our having to arbitrarily lop some off or omit it entirely.
9. Check the published moves, positions, etc. for the games you are in promptly upon receipt of the 'zine, and, if you discover any errors, let the GM know right away. This will also help avoid lengthy delays in the game.
10. Send moves in by mail; use the telephone only as a very last resort.
11. Try to anticipate your SUMMER retreats & send them along with your SPRING moves. Likewise, try to anticipate your AUTUMN retreats and WINTER builds/removals & send them along with your FALL moves. Vice versa, if SUMMER retreats are called for, also send in FALL moves by the SUMMER deadline; and if AUTUMN/WINTER orders are specified, also send in SPRING moves by the AUTUMN/WINTER deadline. We realize such advance orders are not always feasible because of the complexity or delicacy of a situation, but if most players would do this in most games, at least three or four weeks per game-year could be saved.
12. If you don't like something, let the GM know -- but try to remember he is serving many other players as well, and he can't possibly please all of the players all of the time, no matter how hard he may try.

Propaganda --

Ankara -- Sevastopol: Welcome to the club!!

Vienna -- In the pre-dawn hours of this morning, news reached this capital of the occupation of the Tyrol by armed bands of Italian ruffians, and the news was immediately relayed to His Imperial Highness. The young Emperor, of Tyrolian birth, not being particularly devoted to coitus interruptus was doubly annoyed at the arrival of this news. Her Serene Majesty -- the Empress -- was carefully observed by court scandal-mongers for her reaction to not only the news from Tyrolia, but also to this latest crisis of the connubial couch. She appeared characteristically indifferent to the former and somewhat relieved at the latter.

His Highness at once ordered that sufficient forces be dispatched to the Tyrol to eject the Italian hooligans, and then proceeded to clear his bed-chamber of unwanted guests. Her Highness, on the other hand, with just a hint of desperation in her voice suggested that an immediate council of all State Ministers be convened to discuss the Tyrolian situation. Cooler heads prevailed, and the young Emperor was lead reluctantly to the conference hall in the west wing, as her Majesty retired gracefully to her apartments. The nation breathlessly awaits further developments; some to the Tyrolian issue, others to the tribulations of her Highness.

Vienna and Moscow -- The Italian Eye in the Sky Society was not incorrect in reporting the presence of UFO's in the air over Russia. The society was incorrect or misinformed, however, in stating that these flying objects were unidentified. They are Italian in origin.

Two of these primitive flying machines were brought down in widely separated areas of Russia and examined by representatives of the Austrian Government.

The first machine was brought abruptly to earth in the Ukraine by a Russian peasant, Ivan Armanova, who threw a rock through the machine's windshield. The crew -- none seriously injured -- was captured by Ivan's wife and held for the authorities. In crashing, the craft's fuel tanks were ruptured and their contents seeped quickly into the rich Ukrainian soil.

The second was brought to earth intact. This machine had been observed tracking back and forth over the same general area southeast of Moscow for some time. Having been identified as a companion craft of the previous Italian-manned machine, it was decided to attempt to capture this one. Accordingly, one of the Imperial Drive-In Movie Theaters lying in the path of the craft's tracking pattern was ordered to commence a non-stop program of animated cartoons. Sure enough, on the second night of the program (continued in spite of the local peasantry's cultural outrage) the Italian craft came to a sudden stop directly overhead. Lower and lower it hovered. Finally, when the pilot attempted to hook up to one of the remote speakers during a rousing chase scene in one of the better Casper the Friendly Ghost productions, members of the Moscovia militia leaped from their hiding places, roped the machine, and pulled it to earth. The crew demanded to be allowed to see the cartoon to its conclusion and were then led off to captivity.

A quick chemical analysis of the fuel revealed it to be a volatile mixture of tomato sauce and garlic juice. It is unsure whether it had been Italian intentions to also use this mixture as an offensive weapon.

the remains of both craft are presently under intensive study by the Royal Austrian Academy of Science. The crews are being detained -- and entertained -- at the palace in Vienna. It is reported that the Emperor has shown a personal interest in one Gelsomina Matterazza -- the voluptuous navigator of craft #2.

Famed Italian film director Federico Baccala was captured along with the crew of craft #2. Baccala claimed he was doing non-military technical research for a planned Italian science-fiction movie. His internment in the Imperial Palace would effectively postpone indefinitely any Italian movie industry attempts to make any on-location films in Russia. Baccala appeared less distraught over the termination of his film career than his enforced separation from Miss Matterazza with whom he had been collaborating closely on "technical details".

NSG -- Spring skiing conditions may be very hazardous this year. Tourists who are unfamiliar with trails and slopes are advised to proceed with extreme caution unless accompanied by an experienced native guide.

Prague -- The signatories of the Council of Vienna, who have now grown in number from the original fifteen to twenty, have once more met for their annual session. The Third annual meeting began on January 5, 1903, in the residence and capital of the King of all Czechs, Prague.

The Council immediately extended its sympathy to the family of Prince Danilo II of Montenegro on his untimely passing, and its congratulations to Prince Danilo III on his accession; its sympathy to King George III of Bosnia on the death of his beloved wife, Elizabeth; its congratulations to the Cardinal Pontessus Halveghli on his promotion; its congratulations to Czar Bernardo-vich on his accession and victory over the nefarious former Czar Paulinski; and last but not last in our hearts, its congratulations to King Doublas on his accession as sovereign of France.

The Council, after considerable routine work, turned its attention to foreign relations. It reaffirmed its non-aggression pact with the German Empire and Kaiser, and peace treaty with the Italian Empire and Emperor. It also reaffirmed its undying enmity for the Sultan of Turkey, its intention of wiping him and his off the map of Europe for all time, and its firm intention to free the subject state of Bulgaria and return it to its rightful and just ruler, Czar Arrhenius IV.

Turkish atrocities, it seemed, had mounted dramatically since the attack on Crete almost a year ago. Terrorists operating in Macedonia had stepped up their activities and at one point lobbed 14 Turkish-made shells into the city of Thessalonike. Rear Admiral Luttenvarde, senior Council officer in Greece, determined to sail with his entire force for Constantinople to cut off the supplies of these infiltrators. He also called on the assistance of the Hungarian Army, which marched within the week for Thessalonike. "The rebels will certainly be quelled," he reported in a sealed dispatch to the Council, "and the enemy in Bulgaria overthrown." The Council declared its full support for the military and populace, bravely resisting in Greece and Bulgaria, and appropriated an additional Cr. 37 m. for the use of Rear Admiral Luttenvarde's forces.

The Council reaffirmed that any European states desiring to sign the Council would be accepted as full members. This would entail the protection of the Council's armed forces and the incorporation of the signatory's units into them.

Roma: Casta: 2 Jan '03 -- King Eduardo expressed regret on the apparent reticence of the new French king to approach the Italian Empire for negotiations. "All we ask is security," the aging monarch was heard to remark. "The Germans and English want all their lands, but we are seeking only to bring security to our troubled lands." It was widely remembered that the late French ruler brought this war on himself by sending armies into the Piedmont.

NSG -- Just lending you a Fleet. "Trustingly Yours."

A-H -- There are many wise and learned sages in Budapest. They all foresaw the danger in letting Russia run wild and now they weep, for their beloved country is too weak to rid the world of this menace. They only hope the rest of the world has eyes and powerful armies.

Sublime Porte, Constantinople (Aug. 18) -- H.I.M.'s government wishes to announce that a state of war exists between the empire and the realms of the Austrian King (really, calling himself an emperor is now a bit pretentious). H.I.M. has a great fondness for the king and realizes that circumstances have forced him to this act in this manner. She, therefore, is giving six months to reconsider his actions.
If he will accept an Ottoman protectorate over his country, She will immediately dispatch two armies and a fleet to protect the area. The Austrian Army and Navy will be disbanded rather than annihilated by the Russians and Italians. She desires him to give up his foolish notions of honor and to realize what is best for himself and his people. He will remain king and handle all internal matters. Only the foreign policy and the armed forces will be Turkish.
