(TUR). Moves needed in this ish for those players whose names are underlined in the above issue, for the country which follows the player's name. Remember the rules for Stand-By Replacement Players: Make moves when asked to do so; one miss, and you're off the roster for that game; two misses, and you're off the entire replacement player roster. Replacement moves are automatically asked for when a player misses a move; if he misses a second consecutive time, the replacement player's moves are used and the replacement player enters the game in place of the player for whom he submitted moves. More replacement players are needed, particularly where the above list has three or less names. The only requirement to be a replacement player is that you are already receiving the magazine (as a player, trader, or subscriber); there is no fee.

Vienna -- Prime Minister Kossuth announced today that the end of the war is "in clear sight". He said that the German forces are bogged down trying to liberate their own nation from overwhelming Imperial strength, and that the Ottomans are "as good as defeated". ##### He stated that he expected to be able to announce the liberation of France within "months", as the spring offensive was already at the outskirts of Paris. He advised British to stand fast: "With the completion of the war in the east and the surrender of the Sultan's forces, an overwhelming force of Imperial dreadnoughts will be on its way to free the British Isles." ##### Kossuth repudiated those who have called for a cease fire and division of the continent between the Germanic Empires. "We offered such a division in good faith three years ago, and it was refused. The Kaiser must be taught a lesson. If the Kaiser cannot heed the lesson of history, then he must be educated still further."

GM Note -- Anytime you players want a ruling on a situation in which a precedent has not yet been established, just ask, and we'll print a ruling in the next issue. With respect to the ruling requested in PNC, note that we would have ruled the attempted move "A North Africa to Spain" illegal (or impossible), on the grounds that North Africa and Spain are not connected. (Granted, Denmark and Sweden, or the two halves of "Constantinople", are not really connected either -- but under the pre-conditions set down by the designer of the game of Diplomacy, they are considered connected for the purpose of land movement, while Spain and North Africa are not.) ##### A supply center chart, etc., for game PNC will appear in DIPLOMANIA.

Propaganda --

Buckingham Palace -- H.M. Edward VII today announced to the P.M., Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and to Parliament, that war with France was formally declared. H.M. stated, "We did not want this war, a war that was forced upon us. I have been assured by my ministers that England's defense shall be long and costly for the aggressor. I have also been informed that our diplomats are presently discussing with certain foreign powers possible ways to end this unfortunate aggression. Long live England and the Empire!"

Turkey -- The Ottoman Empire has pledged its support to the staunch fighters of the Northern Empire. It is hoped that the Pope will join us in removing the vestiges of the warmongers and upsetters of the world's stability. This would unite the three great European religions and insure peace in Europe.

Propaganda --

England -- Russia: Let's not move toward English territory. It makes me nervous!

England -- Turkey: Have read your copy of French dispatch offering to double-cross me. Yet I remember no such double-cross occurring. I think that you've been had, sonny. Besides I see no reason why I should come to any kind of terms with a kid who has promised to attack me in every game we play in due to an imagined slight in SCC.

Propaganda (almost forgot) --

Paris -- Louis the Last announced a new foreign policy today -- "Help the Russians in the South and fight them in the North...or let the English fight them!" Louis hoped that the Russians would sit still to receive the support sent by the Admiral of the South, Jean Daine. "Otherwise those crafty Italians will get a build in Rome", he stated. "I hope the Russians realize that by helping them we're ensuring that we get run out of Smyrna in two seasons -- we had planned to move Ion-Aeg but for the picture of those forlorn Russkis sitting there surrounded by fifty million wops."

Rome -- England: You are getting the short straw. France has got you barred from anything but the Scandinavian centers, to give you a grand total of seven centers. Big Deal! You, sir, have been bought, and cheaply. France is wide open, and if you attack, I will be willing to give you a draw (yes, I'm perfectly serious -- without your aid I'm doomed, though France is going to have to work hard for it. It is worth sharing the victory to me). France can make no such offer in good faith -- he is out for the win. I hope you see my side, and will come over to it. ##### Let me reiterate, I am willing to give you a draw in exchange for your aid, no matter how long it takes to arrange one. -- Humbert

Propagandá --

Berlin -- Let me remind you that France did build in Marseilles, and also that he gets you after he gets me. If we ally, we can together eliminate Russia's remainder, and hit France. #### Note that I will fall, giving France 16 units, before you can get up to 13. Also, you might note that in DAA, a French attack into the Med. is doing to Italy almost exactly what the same attack is going to do to you in the near future. Also note the evil potential of A Tyrolia, and army Marseilles (which is in Burgundy now, probably, since you raised such a stink about it). At the moment you are at the mercy of France, as Italy always is when he is moving east. I wish you luck, for at the moment you seem to need it.

France -- Italy: Vienna is a dead letter. But a thrust at Munich may unsettle Kaiser Billy.

Rome -- Paris: I realize you want to get into Burgundy, so I won't take any actions now about your build unless you do something naughty with it.

Deadline for SUM'08 propagandá (no SUM retreats) -- Noon, Tues., April 22. (If all players send in F'08 moves by April 22, we'll publish them, too.)
