

Normally, there is a section here which describes what Dot Happy is, subscription rates, etc. Since I am not doing this on my normal system, I am going to assume you all know about this. If not, look at DH #20.

HELLO!

As you have all no doubt surmised, this issue does not look like the normal Dot Happy. And, as you have probably already noticed, this issue is later than would normally be expected. These are related.

First things first - I have moved. I have made it out of Massachusetts!!! My new address is:

37 Royal Crest Drive #2
Nashua, NH 03060
(603) 888-5063

This new address is effective immediately!! Please send all correspondence there (although forwarding from the old address is working).

The move, of course, is the main reason this issue is late. The last issue warned about this, so I hope the delay comes as no surprise to anyone. Unfortunately, this issue was delayed even more by a more unfortunate experience. I went to use the system I normally use for word processing, and typed the issue up. Then I found out (a little late) that the printer for the system was quite dead. It had probes sticking out of it, and, all in all, looked quite bad. So, I waited a few days and showed back up. It was still dead. It seems the guy who normally makes sure things stay working is on vacation. So, I found this Xerox 860 to work on (shitty system) and I've learned enough to, hopefully, get this out in fairly good shape. I apologize for the delay, and rest assured I am looking for ways to make sure it doesn't happen again.
