Game Openings: Diplomacy!

This issue is going to have to be dedicated to Pete Gaughan. Why? Because it is printed on green paper. Why is it on green paper? Nobody is too sure, so I won't hazard a guess.

Thanks to all of you for showing your support in the Runestone Poll. I placed 15th among 104 zines voted on, and 13th among 116 GMs. I am most proud of my improved GM rating (which would have won the most improved award except John Boardman was finally recognized after 20 years in the hobby!). Congratulations to Conrad von Metzke for winning the poll for the second time and to Andy Lischett for winning the GM poll.

Congratulations also have to go to Bruce Linsey for another outstanding effort in the producing The Cream Shall Rise and to Linda Courtemanche for sponsoring the pledge drive. Dippers have pledged over $1,400 for the American Cancer Society! (Linda and Steve also won the subzine poll with High Inertia)

Where is High Plains Gonzo running? For about the 4th year in a row it is listed in the subzine poll; one year it was in FF, another in Politesse I think. Where is it now? Thanks go to the kind soul that gave The Gonzo Report a 10. I was calling it a subzine last year because I make so many separate mailings, but I guess it is actually just a part of FF. It is difficult to consider them as separate entities, since I produce and print both. All in all I am quite pleased with the results, so thanks!

GAME OPENINGS

The game opening that I announce in June has filled, but I got three more checks than necessary, so I am going to open one more game. If you are interested send me a check for $10 gamefee, make sure your sub is current, and if you don't get in the game I will refund your money. Four more people and we have a game.

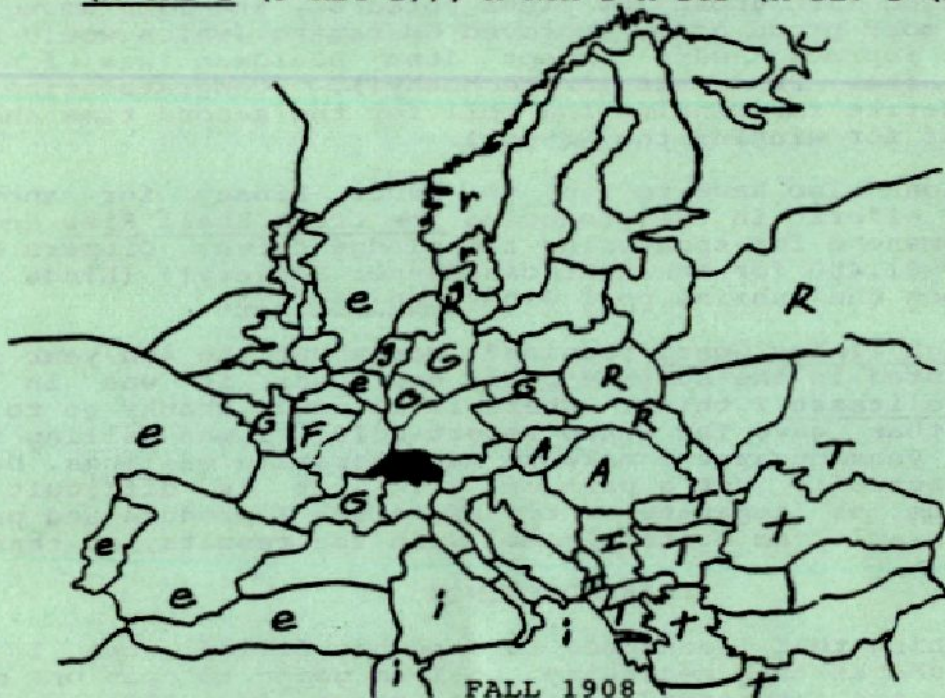

STANDBYS

We are about to have a standby crises. Chilly Willy, the orphaned game I just took, has already required three standbys be called, and with the new game openings I need a few more. Here is my current standby list; please let me know if you want on (or off, if you must!): Steve Emmert, Derwood Bowen, and Garret Schenck. Thanks to these three gentlemen, and those that I have called this issue.

FEUILLETONIST'S FORUM is an amateur monthly zine dedicated to the play and discussion of Diplomacy! (invented by Allan Calhamer and Copyrighted by The Avalon Hill Game Company), and Presidential Politics (invented and copyrighted by Jake Halverstadt). Publisher/Editor: Greg Ellis, 700 Rio Grande, Austin TX 78701-2720. Phone #: (512) 343-8202. Readers are encouraged to participate in the letter column, which is primarily for the discussion of politics or PBM issues. Ads cannot be purchased, but worthy causes can get a free plug. Subs are $5/10 issues.

DEADLINE FOR SPRING 1901 IS SEPTEMBER 12, 1987

It was pretty much unanimous to use the September deadline, and I have received preliminary orders from all players. Good Luck!

A few people have asked about the origin of my game names, and this one will probably be the most confusing yet! All the games are named for journalists who write political commentary. While political writers are not, strictly speaking, feuilletonists, they represent a combination of the feuilletonist and the forum. Molly writes for the Dallas Times Herald and is well known for her acerbic attacks on legislators in general and Republicans in particular.

RESTON PRESS

ENG-RUS: No communication is not a good way to start our relationship! Once again, Russia forces my hand.

GME-RUS: Don't worry, Morgan LOVES it when someone forces his hand, especially big strong guys like you! Well, maybe you do need to worry.

RUS-BOARD: Oh, well. You can't please everybody, and when you try you can't please anybody.

GME-RUS: Maybe we ALL need to worry with you forcing people's hands and trying to please everybody!

RUS-GER: Say your prayers. You're the only player who hasn't been friendly. Now you pay ...

GME-GER: I think you did the right thing. The price of his friendship may be too high. Ask Morgan.

RUS-ENG: The Russo-English war is over. ((Have you been to St. Pete lately?)) But that doesn't mean I'm not going to defend myself. I expect some reward down the road.

GME-ENG: I'm not even going to ask about the reward!

GME-READERS: Sorry about that. Morgan seems to bring out the worst in me, as those who attended DipCon will attest. On Sunday night (after an entire day of trading cuts) Morgan said he was getting hungry. He then took about 5 minutes to explain to us all that he hadn't eaten anything that day, and in fact had only had a coke or two. "All I have had today has been liquid," he said to me, "I haven't chewed on anything today at all!"

I couldn't help myself. All I could say was, "Well, don't look at me!"

The problem with Mr. Meese

[[This is an editorial from the Journal on July 29, 1987.]]

The questioning yesterday of Edwin Meese had a weirdly ethereal quality. The American people having decided that Ollie North is innocent of any crime, here were lawyers for the congressional panel in effect asking Mr. Meese why he didn't immediately start reading the Marine his Miranda rights. The real question is, was any of this necessary?

Indeed, it's clear to us that the administration's biggest mistake was the news conference Mr. Meese held on November 25 to break the story of the diversion of Iran arms profits to the Contras, which plunged the executive branch into constitutional purgatory. Recall the chronology: Mr. Meese spent the weekend of November 22-23 investigating what happened to the profits from the arms sales to Iran. On Monday, he told President Reagan about a memo by Lt. Col. North referring to an account for the Contras. By Tuesday morning, Lt. Col. North was fired, John Poindexter was reassigned and the decision was made the Mr. Meese would hold a news conference at noon.

Mr. Meese announced that the diversion was up to $30 million. The correct figure turned out to be about $3 million, but this was a comparatively small mistake. The big problem was that in its haste to rush the story out, the White House never thought through its own political, legal and constitutional position. Of course the administration had made mistakes, and now had to get the story out. But it didn't need to roll over. Following the basic line worked out at the White House, Mr. Meese used the news conference to portray Ollie North as Rasputin to a hapless President.

ABC's Sam Donaldson was quick to play ex-officio district attorney. He asked: "Did what Col. North do, is that a crime? Will he be prosecuted?"

"We are presently looking into the legal aspects of it," Mr. Meese replied, "as to whether there's any criminality involved. We're also looking precisely at his involvement and what he did, so that the conclusions as to whether there's any criminal acts involved is still under inquiry by us."

Imagine if instead Mr. Meese had replied in these words, "It is mind boggling to me that Congress has attempted to criminalize policy differences between coequal branches of government and the executive's conduct of foreign affairs. I suggest to you that it is the Congress which must accept the blame in the Nicaraguan freedom fighter matter. Plain and simply, Congress is to blame because of the fickle, vacillating, unpredictable, on-again, off-again policy toward the Nicaraguan democratic resistance -- the Contras."

If these words are familiar, it's because Ollie North spoke them to Congress eight months after the Meese news conference. This is when the tide started to turn against the administration's tormentors. At the first sign of resistance, the congressional balloon popped. If some resistance had started back in November, a great deal of agony and damage would have been averted.

Mr. Meese deserves some sympathy for being gun-shy. He has been investigated for one thing or another just about since he stepped off the plane from California. Accusations of ethics violations

It's not clear, either, that Mr Meese was more than the messenger boy for the decision to defend on the grounds of Presidential ignorance instead of Presidential prerogatives. In watergate, Congress and the press learned the utility of criminal charges such as "obstruction of justice." And Congress has been erecting legalistic restraints on members of the executive with such things as the Boland amendments and ethics in government acts (which do not apply to members of Congress). In this sense, the preoccupation with avoiding the appearance of a "cover-up" was understandable.

The lesson of the Iran-contra hearings, it seems to us, is that the next President is going to have to think a lot about his constitutional powers and how best to assert and protect them. He'll need a lawyer, as attorney general or White House counsel, to give the kind of advice Mr. Meese didn't give last November. We wonder if Brendan Sullivan would be interested in the job.

Now that the hearings are over, I would like to hear what you have to think about the affair. Was a crime committed? If so, by whom? Should President Reagan be impeached if he knew about the diversion of the funds? Should he be impeached for not knowing? Which was the greater wrong, the diversion or dealing arms to terrorists for hostages?

GFL 1987

Well, the draft is done, finally. It was a little tougher than I anticipated, I made more mistakes than I thought I would, and I didn't get the last list until the 16th. By that time I was into my study schedule for finals, so the draft had to wait until August. I hope you haven't been too inconvenienced.

One change we will make for next year's draft is that I will make the deadline later, so that the preseason football books will be out, and I will have a system of penalizing those who get lists in late.

Your team roster shows who you drafted and when (which round and what position in that round). If I made any mistakes that I didn't catch I am sorry, but an apology is all you are going to get. I would conceivably have to change every team roster to repair one mistake.

Overall, I think everyone pretty much got who they wanted. I did close the draft down three rounds early because a majority of you had run out of players on most of your lists (note that Brian Russell has several head coaches -- the only list left with any available "players"). Three players have a 21st round listed so that I could give them a head coach.

An example of why I think that people generally got who they wanted is in the Quarterback draft for Oregon. While completing the 16th round of the draft I found two mistakes in the second round. As I went back through all the lists to make corrections I noticed that Oregon had selected a Running Back in round 3 where he should have been drafting a Quarterback. His correct draft was Schonert QB ATL. I then had to go through all the other rounds that I had completed and take Schonert away from whoever got him. It turned out that Oregon had originally drafted him in round 10! Obviously not many of you thought Schonert was top three round material. I hope you are all happy with what you got, and I encourage you to use trades between now and Labor Day to do any needed fine tuning.

The scoring rule changes will be in effect throughout the preseason and may be subject to some adjustment prior to the season opener. Please notice that the Punters have been moved to the defensive score and that a fourth goal has been added for all the categories that had three goals before.

Because the draft and rule changes were taking place at the same time, I felt it prudent (most of you who responded mentioned this!) to keep the goals pretty close to what they were when you made up your draft lists. I have been trying to find a way to work in the Special Teams but I can't get the proper goals set and come up with an equitable way to allow owners to draft them. Special Teams seemed to be a popular addition, so help me think of a way to score it and we will add it for next year.

I appreciate all the input that I got, and I tried to formulate a consensus or compromise where possible. Remember that the rules are not written in stone, and we can always go back to last year's system. Check everything over and let me know what you think.

DEADLINE FOR ROSTER CUT TO 21: SEPTEMBER 1, 1987

If I don't get your cut by that date, I will eliminate all but the first 21 players listed as long as you have enough to cover every position.

HF Home Field is worth one point.

FREE AGENTS

The system that I used for picking up free agents last year didn't work out as well as I had hoped, so that will be different this season. Every team may pick up ONE free agent each week. If two teams attempt to get the same player whoever DRAFTED first gets him. Free agent selections must be to me by Saturday at 9:00 p.m. of each week.
