Italy has established fleets in Rome and Naples, and an army in Venice. This gives Italy an absolute majority of the units on the board, and Italy is accordingly the victor. The French government has acknowledged its defeat in the following communique:

"The French Government congratulates H. M. the King of Italy on his successful reunification of the Roman Empire, and willingly accepts the sovereignty of its Latin brother."

The Italian government has made public an analysis of the war, with its master plan for post-war Europe. This document will be published in GRAUSTARK #16.
