GAME 1975G, END-GAME REPORT

GM Note: Tony Albano's orders arrived late, but they included a yes vote for the draw which makes it unanimous. Also, he wanted me to print a correction to the rumor that he had quit his games. That was wrong! He has never entertained the thought of quitting his games. I reported that I read it somewhere, but could not find the statement, so I must blame myself. Please accept my apologies, Tony! The only player report received is that from Tony.

1975G was unique in that father and son played in the same game without being in the game at the same time. Theoretically, there is nothing illegal about such close relations being in the same game, it has always been anathema to gamesmasters and players alike to have close relatives in the same game at the same time.

In this game, Lee Kendter, Sr. just happened to appear at the top of my then current stand-by pool and since his son was eliminated by that time, I used him without any worry of causing any alarm.

1975G also was well played with only two player resigning, partly under protest, and partly due to nearing extinction.

All in all, I feel 1975G was a well played game and all partners in this draw need not feel guilty about not winning it all.

FROM TONY ALBANO (replacement for Germany):

1975G represents my last game in Impassable. I enjoyed your zine and commend its high quality. Thank you for the excellent GM'ing and good luck in your new hobby interests.

PITTER-PATTER

Well, Impassable is now down to one single game going. Circulation is also dropping very fast. Next issue is likely to be carbon copy or xeroxed--either which would be cheaper than using the vinyl stencil--and easier than using the old wax stencils.

I'm slowing down to a monthly pace, but with calling for 3-week deadlines and only take a week to get it together (incredible, isn't it?) makes for a total of 4-weeks between deadlines. Oh well...

This is saying so long until next time.

this is wasted paper space...but who can
