Canada is in the middle of a Federal election campaign at the moment, and we'd tell you all about it except that nothing has happened yet. Prime Minister and head of the Liberal Party is leader Sir Pierre Trudeau. He's a bachelor, Alphas down hammers, kisses a lot of young girls, and talks tough to Quebec ("They speak funny French"). This appears to be his campaign. Progressive Conservative Party leader Bob Stanfield isn't a swinger like Wonder Boy; in fact, he bears a distinct resemblance to an undertaker. (His family has made its money selling Stanfield Underwear—their long Johns are famous.) He also eats bananas and drinks Red Cape (Nelson's voting for him . . .). Tommy "Canada" Douglas, leader of the New Democrats, is now arriving, and has been since 1943, to convince this country that it is in imminent danger of a take-over by capitalists. (It's interesting to note that Wonder Boy is an ex-New Democrat, who three years ago called the Liberal Party "idiots", the ex-who made Stanfield Tory leader—a certain Dalton Camp—is an ex-liberal, and Tommy the Canada is an ex-.) The other parties have problems. The National leader (not of course) of the Social Credit Party is running for the Tories, while the ex-Deputy Leader is running for the Brits (our ancient name for the liberals in Canada). The leader of the Creditists is running on a pro-Canada, anti-capitalist campaign in a somewhat northern Quebec, the ex-Deputy Leader of the Creditists has left the Federal arena to run as an anti-Canada, pro-capitalist separatist in the provincial arena in the same area. (Both will be elected.) The ex-leader of the Tories is running as a Tory to support his theory that Canada is "one nation". The rest of the party favours "one nation", and are also running as Tories. The Conservatives have come out for a guaranteed annual income, the liberals oppose it, and the New Democrats are wondering if it's an American plot. The Creditists are more interested in a fixed price for the sale of pigs.

All this may sound a little slighting (and it is), but it meant in a respectful manner. Without humour politics would be . . . we might almost say "non-Canadian" (as if Canadians could imagine such a thing), for, in the words of Hood, we remain "antipathetic to the psychology of the mass" and other modern idiocies of the political world. We are 19th century, provincial, tolerant, noisy and anti-ideological in our politics—and proud of it.

We'd have more on the election but Lake is going Grit, Nelson Tory, and our Canadian readership everything but Soered (you are voting Creditists, aren't you, Trevor?). C'est la Canadian.

FROM THE OFFICES OF THE EDITORIAL STAFF:

An enjoyable weekend was had by the four of us in the vicinity of the Youngstown steel mills last Saturday and Sunday, a time in which blood was shed in Avalon-Hill and Gamescience creations, and a time time in which much Rolling Rock and Red Gap was quaffed by all-- with the inevitable results, including the lateness of this issue.
(We are, of course, referring to dia-rhoea--which objective tests insure us is not the Red Cap's fault.)

That minor detail aside, ours thanks again to John Koning and family and John Baythe and family for their hospitality.

We recommend Gamescience's "Battle of Britain" for fun-type war games, and Avalon-Hill's "VOLA" for the VERY serious.

"Since the dawn of time, men have competed with each other-- with clubs, crossbows, or cannon, dollars, ballots, and trading stamps. Much of mankind, of course, abhors competition, and these remain the acted upon, not the actors.

Anyone who says there will be no competition in the future simply does not understand the nature of man."

---T. R. Fechenbach

"What makes the radical grouping in relation to the peace issue more of a posture than a position is its inherited arrogance--a conceit that one is the exclusive possessor of truth, while other points of view are seen to be moving toward or away from this higher truth."

---Irving L. Horowitz

JJ Game # 3 (1967AZ)

POSTPONEMENT

Due to overwork caused by wife and child and home, due to Willowdale's lack of a diplomacy set, and ("pass the Black Label, Derek") other factors a few things happened which shouldn't have happened, and a few things didn't which should have; ie, in plain Canadian -- French Fleet English Channel had to retreat to Brest, Wales or Irish English Army Belgium was killed dead; ie, annihilated Austrian Army Trieste, which neither gamesmaster nor Doug Baker mentioned last turn, actually exists, and is alive and hiding in Trieste.

Even though the players have showed a decided lack of cool in not noticing their countries were loused up, we have generously decided they may have another few weeks to submit revised moves for the Fall, 1903 moves (and conditional builds--which would speed the game up again).
