 "Well, said Moeshoeshoeus, the faithful Celtic servant, didn't that Liesnard pretend he had a circulation of 110 with this rag?"

"That's right, answered Hasdrubal, but I only see 72 names on the mailing list above! I think the fiend will publish a supplementary list on next page."

- Watson, Malcolm. 7 Alexander Drive, Timperley, Altrincham, Cheshire, Royaume-Uni. (T?).

"You were quite right, said Hannibal with a smile, but even if he treacherously sends 5 samples to that S&D, he only has a circulation of 82....!"

"Yes, added Hamilcar, but that's rather better than what Patterson can afford with his "War Bulletin". And, moreover, I've been told by an Australian friend of mine that Liesnard was planning to translate into French some articles formerly published in "Hoosier Archives".

"Mmmmm, continued Hannibal, I really do not believe the Belgian agent of "HA" will be glad when he'll read this. I think he is also the editor of a "Moeshoeshoe" or something like that, and he wanted to translate them by himself."

"Wait and see, concluded Moeshoeshoeus, perhaps we could have a good feud between Feron and the other backstabbing devil. That would be funnier to read than a mailing list..."

"I agree with you, replied Hamilcar, but you should note he will not print the addresses of the players, but only their telephone numbers."

"It does not matter in the least, noted Hannibal, as we can find all those addresses into the mailing list."

"Now, how do you explain this? moaned Hannibal, more talkative than ever. The Liesnard wrote on page 1 that this is a "weekly" fanzine, this issue is dated October 30 and he dare ask next move orders for November 11!"

"I think I can give you a fairly good explanation, shouted Dylan as he jumped out from Desolation Row, but you'll need turn on next page to get it."

"Now the postman gave him two cures
"An' he said, jump right in
"The one was Piggott medicine
"The other was just War Bulletin
"An' like a fool he read them
"An' it strangled up his mind
"An' now people get uglier
"An' he has no sense of time.
