

I know it doesn't appear like it but this is LDNS. Issue #34, the last issue. Some of you may have heard that LDNS is closing its doors but for those who haven't heard, LDNS is folding.

The reasons are many. Believe it or not there was a lot of pride involved with this zine and it is not an easy task to fold it. Possibly it is because of that pride that LDNS is folding. The zine is not as good as it was during the first year. But the largest reason for the fold is that the zine has become a burden rather than a hobby.

One thing that you find out when you start to publish is that there are a lot of idiots out there. I take that back, there aren't a lot of them its just that they stick out. I wish that people would keep in mind that this is a hobby and just because one opts to publish doesn't change the fact that it's still a hobby.

Why does someone decide to publish? One, (and this was my reason) is that they want to have a zine that they would want to play in. I was in a lot of "Yearly" zines and the games were dragging on. So I decided to start a prompt three week zine. A zine with some enjoyable reading and little or no tirades. All I wanted was a "kicked-back" fun to play in zine. But another reason that someone starts a zine is to gain a little "fame". To become a "name" in the hobby. I don't think that that is an open reason but nevertheless after awhile you think about it. Whatever the reason, as soon as you publish your first issue you are open to every cheap shot artist in the hobby. What's the hardest for me to understand is that most of these cheap shots come from other publishers. More than anyone some publishers seem to think that they are the model for perfection and if you don't come up to their standards you might as well get out of the hobby and go back and play Risk.

Since this is kind of a reflections issue, here are some of the things that I've grown to hate in the past two years.

As I said earlier, the petty people in this hobby make it a total drag! And there is a LOT of petty things happening in this hobby. Because I don't meet John Bored-man's standards he goes out of his way to make me out as some kind of idiot in his zine. That's what the hobby needs, more cooperation!

I think that it is good for the hobby to talk over, discuss new items that come along. Most recently, rating systems. But here again, there is a lot of petty talk. Critical observations are helpful to someone trying a different approach but some things do no good at all. Notes like, "What a crappy system" "I won't look at it." "Don't use my name in it." "etc." All of those do nothing for the fellow designing the system (or whatever). Think about it for a minute. Nobody HAS to do anything in this hobby. Rating systems, tournaments, zines, etc. are done by people because they want to, not because they have to. And as soon as you try someone different you immediately open yourself up to all of the petty crap that follows this hobby like the plague. In a hobby based on Diplomacy there are some tactless people running around. Example: When Pat started helping with the publishing duties of LDNS one person wrote concerning a game in the zine that there was an omission in a game as a unit, and this jerk told Pat to leave the little blocks of wood alone and get back to the kitchen where she belongs. For that remark I will never forget him and if it makes him feel any bigger he made a woman cry. What a man! Of course if had he read the zine he'd have read that I was still GMing the games. And people wonder why people get out of the hobby!

All last week I was thinking about the things that I hated about publishing and now that I'm starting to type them it's not helping just making me feel worse so I am not going to go on. Instead I'm going to thank all of the people who make doing something like this worthwhile, the people who...

I'd list your names but that would require me to list 90% of my sub list.

Thanx to you for 2+ good years.

As for the future of me, LDNS and your games. You can't get rid of me that easy. I'll still be around. LDNS will no longer be around in its former size and content. The games will be cared until completion by me in a warehouse LDNS. There is a chance that after a while LDNS will be back as LDNS II. It will be a zine by invitation only. More on that if it comes to be.

Once again I thank you (most of you anyway) for your support and to the rest...why bother, they won't change.

WARSAW: With the troubles on two fronts not to our liking, it has been decided to disengage in the South.

CONSTANTINOPLE: Miserable wretched war! We honorable Turkeys have had enough. The women & Children are being corralled into Syria by the few remaining troops and the water-filled rowboats are being auctioned off to whichever party will part with the most gundrops. The Czar was loudly lambasted as an unspeakable cad. Indeed, a few words here and there may have prevented this pitiable retreat. It might interest you to know, Cliff, that you will never receive that mop water the English sent you for ground-hogs day. It was "misplaced" in Smyrna and deflected to Bul. Ha, ha! The Turban-Top explained only that the gift was unsuitable because, ironically, Russia isn't hogging much ground anymore. Anyway, the mop water was fed to neighboring Austrians (they thought it was potato soup), so it wasn't a total waste.

VIENNA: Radio Vienna reported today that Chancellor Berkeley has called for a low level ministril meeting between Aus and Ita officials to iron out "minor technical difficulties" in their policy towards the East. Chancellor Berkeley "The Rock of Austria" has stated that no nation on earth tells Austria how to conduct its foreign policy, not even.

its allies. Surely all of this can be ironed out between our Italian brothers-in-arms and ourselves.

TRIESTE-Newly raised Army of Trieste was recently placed on a 3 day alert much to the consternation of Vienna. It was disclosed that Gen Von Shickelgruber upon hearing of Italy's Eastern Declaration ordered the alert and prepared to invade Italy itself. "No slinky Italian dare tell Austria where to stick its bayonets!"

Gen Adolph has been removed of his Trieste command and placed in charge of Army Serbia where he may kill as many Turks and Russians as he pleases.

Vienna to Paris: Much thanks to our French friends for the 100 train car of Munich Lowenbrau. We are sorry to report that about 50 cars were empty and a protest to the Italian border garrison has been lodged.

Army Serbia: Dear Father, Gunz here. We have been doing a lot of entrenching and transfers as you may note. We are all primed for an Eastern Offensive deep into our enemies homeland but as yet we know not where. Our sergeants all tell us that the Italians are starting to get uppity with us, but so far they have served us well and many a brave Italian has fallen where one of us might have. Our sergeants say that will just make the crops grow better full of all that Italian crap- a crude lot our sergeants.

The Burgandy Frontier: "OK, George, you got me all the way out here-so what's the problem?" "Sorry about the inconvenience, Mr. Pres. but if you will just train your glasses over the fields below us..."

"Why? Just looks like some German patrols." "Look again, sir. Note th Khaki fatigues, the telltale sunglasses..." "Oh my God! Cubans!" "Yes sir-Ringers fresh from Africa." "Cuban Expeditionary Forces! I don't believe it! Those little maniacs don't know when to quit!" "Well, naturally, we were a bit worried. What will our policy be on this?" "That will have to wait. This whole area is swarming with those crazed Latin mercenaries. Cover me, Geo, I'll try and make it back to the Limo." (To be continued)

ENGLAND: Thousands more of England's finesy young men have crowded into London with each passing day. They are here in responce to King GrabFast's call for the Raising of an army to drive the Russians out of Sweden and to restore Freedom to that fair land.

The King also condemned the Germans for failing to work in concert with the English and preventing the usupption of Swedish sovereignty. While not threateding direct action against the Hun, the King said "Just wait till they ask us for a favor.

The King refused to comment on the rumor that terms had already been sent to the Russians, that demanded they evacuate Sweden or face complete destruction.

Italy to Europe: Italy has accepted its destiny. Too long have French dreams of Neo-Nepoleonic grandeur been borne by its enfeebled neighbors. Had not German (past) paranoia not interdicted Italian units heading North and East the French menace would have been eliminated earlier. Italinn pride had demanded redress for the German insults hence the assist of France into Munich. The German chastisement is complete. The French admonition has begun. No longer will Bavarians have to doff their caps when passing French soldiers, officials, clerics, secret police and street sweepers. No longer will each and every south German female have to hoist her dirndl upon demand by any Frenchman no matter how important he may be. No more! Munich is German! This is the way it will be from this day forward.

Will the English see their destiny too? Italy wonders. Mass cards are filled and prayers said in every church in Italy that the ruddy English noblemen and their hardy minions will see the insult delivered them by the French. Have not the foul French not treated the English as non-existent and objects of neither worry nor concern? Arise Britannia! Brest and Portugal are your birthright!

Will the Russian serfs armed with pitchforks and broken blunderbusses never learn? Will their corrupt Czar never admit his errors? The inept, unkept, cafish, asian-steppe antics of Russians have no place in Europe. Must they always be beaten back with cannades of grapeshot, doberman pinchers and bars of soap tied on the ends of ten-foot poles? Now that they've been repelled from their wallowing holes in Galicia Europe can breathe cleaner air again. The car-loads of Russian, sea-going neanderthals in Sweden may now feel uneasy and the British empire might see fit to dust them into the Baltic or elsewhere. Perhaps they'll simply tire of tall statuesque blondes and yearn for their hairy, 300 pound sweethearts back in their home country. We shall see.

AMIIIIII, The Turks! Fierce, proud and possessors of an absolute refusal to die. They may be lowly and they may be insufferably crude but their zest for...for...for even MERE EXISTENCE is remarkable. Perhaps they will vent their spleens on their Eastern co-existents the Russians. Italy awaits such a development with a heart ready to show a...a...a maximum diminution of desire to expunge Turkey. The diminution would occur, of course, in careful stages. (If you say "trust" to a Turk he'll look at you with a blank stare.)

Italy wonders aloud at the peculiarly fractious relationship between its allies, Germany and Austria. Why does Aus seek to heap invective on its Teutonic Brother? A formal and public declaration of condemnation ~~is~~ is hereby issued. Furthermore, Italy condemns the Refusal of its new ally Germany to have diplomatic relations with Austria. Italy despairs at the existence of the situation. Italy is positioned between these two diplomatic antagonists and there is natural desire not to be caught in the middle.

Thought for the day: "War knocks down trees so tht others may grow."
