Where Have All The Dollars Gone?

by Hoto & Zeke

Someone once said that inflation is the unseen tax. Unseen, my ass! Every time I reach for my wallet, I can see it very clearly. The $10 bills there resemble $1 bills more and more all the time. With double-digit inflation I guess it's only a matter of time before they tack on another zero to the bills now out.

However, no matter how much we rely on the government agencies throwing numbers in our faces, dates, buying power, etc., the real problem with inflation is in the application of the theories, not in the numbers themselves. It is when inflation eats at our ability to buy new clothes or a beer that it is a real pain in the aforementioned ass.

Therefore, for your reading pleasure and mental anguish, here are a few of these commonplace "slices" to lend those impotent numbers unfortunate potency.

"What comes between me and my Calvins?"
$41.95.

Although many American designers hope Nancy Reagan's taste can bolster their business, one man sells anything he can put his name on. Calvin Klein is the only jean label that the dealers on M Street won't put on sale.

Some manufacturers' prices have come down because of competition, but the crunch hasn't hit Klein. Last year his label had one line selling at $38.95. Today those jeans will cost you $41.95. They must be worth it (I don't know, I've never owned anything but genuine Levis); Brooke Shields ignores her rent to buy them.

There are, however, people for whom Calvin just isn't good enough. Officials from various embassies go up to Up Against The Wall asking for the most expensive jeans they carry. Hearing their meager price, the foreigners often turn and walk away. They are looking for $100.00 jeans.

I was getting desperate. See, it was Tuesday and I spent the whole night in the library. Well, maybe not the whole night, but it seemed like a very long half hour.

"God, I need a beer" was repeating in my brain in place of the calc formulas I neglected to memorize. "To hell with this," I thought, and I ran back to New South to collect all of my pennies that I received as change for the numerous Cokes I'd bought all semester....Forty-seven, forty-eight, forty-nine,...FIFTY! To the Pub!

Caring not that it was Soul Night, I ran past the doorman flashing my ID. Then the familiar phrase, "Last call for alcohol," sang out over the PA system. "Just in time," I sighed.

So I step up to the counter and say in my best Bogart, "Give me a Schlitz and make it quick, buddy." I nonchalantly toss the pennies on the stained wood counter, much to the bartender's dismay. As I hold up the glistening brew, preparing all senses for the impending shock, suddenly the guy grabs the beer out

GRR! Bad Dog Tops Mascot Poll

BRUX, the bad dog of the Jack Masters' household, garnered the most votes in LSD's Hobby Mascot Poll, a plurality of 12 votes out of the total 62 cast.

Second place was captured by CARUSO, the LSD housecat, who received 9 votes. The dog that started it all, Bruce Linsey's TROUBLE took third with 7 votes, and Gary Coughlan's nominee, the GREAT WHITE SHARK got 6 votes for fourth place.

In a tie with 5 votes each were KATHY THE BETA, the CAMELEON, and NOBODY. KATHY BYRNE received 3 votes, and the PET ROCK and the DIREBERCH each received 2 votes. Receiving only 1 vote apiece were BLOODSUCKER, BOB THE MOA, JOHNNIE THE GNOME, MASTERS, the DIPPER FROM EO, and CALHAMER.

We are unable to show the readers a picture of the poll winner, but we understand he growled and bared his teeth when informed of the result. Perhaps Masters, his master, will publish BRUX's picture in BLACK FROG.

Upon hearing that a dog won the poll, CARUSO's response was, "Nao!" But he promised to keep his toenails sharp in case BRUX abdicates his position. CARUSO did vow to stay out of Mike's lap for at least six months (but with the arrival of warmer weather, Mike welcomed this turn of events).

Despite a dramatic scenario in the recent issue of VOICE OF DOOM portraying a victory for TROUBLE, it was not to be, and the also-ran dog had no comment for our reporters.

A request for a run-off vote among the top 3 or 4 vote-getters brought snorts to the nostrils of the leading candidates, who were all exhausted from the rigorous campaign.

As a final note on the vote tally, MARTHA COLE received 1 write-in vote, and three ballots were thrown out as improperly cast or illegible.

The staff and management of LSD extend thanks to the other hobby publishers who gave the Mascot Poll such excellent coverage in the zinepress. And thanks to all the hobby members who took the trouble to express their preference for this important post.

★ ROUNDUP

of Texas & International News

GAMESTARTS!!! The end of the phone demonstration game leaves room for 2 more games of regular Dip. These are the last games to start here for at least six months, perhaps longer. The gamefee has been increased to $10 to discourage frivolous entries and NMRs. For players in these games ("H" & "I" -- anyone have suggestions for code names?) the awards have been increased to the following levels: sole winner gets a ten-issue sub extension to LSD, participants in a 2-way draw each get 7 issues. All other survivors will get 5 free issues of LSD. As a consolation prize, 3 freebies will go to players who are eliminated. Players who drop or are replaced get nothing, but replacement players will be eligible for all prizes. PUBLISHERS: Do not plug these openings, please.

CORRECTION. The DPA proposal printed last issue was incorrectly attributed. If you have any comments they should be addressed to the author of that article, Al Pearson; Rt. 1, Box 177B5; Kearneysville, WV 25430; who also publishes JUST AMONG FRIENDS.

STATISTICS. EVERYTHING #47 is now available for 60¢ from its soon-to-be-former publisher Bob Sergeant; 3242 Lupine Drive, Indianapolis, IN 46224 (who also publishes ST. GEORGE & THE DRAGON). It is not exciting reading, since it's the official journal of the Boardman Number Custodian, Lee Kendter, Sr.; 4347 Benner St.; Philadelphia, PA 19135. It's his duty to issue serial numbers to postalgames and print pertinent facts about each game: zine, names of players, and results. Currently reported winners include LSD readers Mark Johnson (79CR), Al Pearson (76EK), Ron Brown (77HG), Lee Kendter, Sr. (78HA), Bob Sergeant (78HU), John Caruso (78CZ), Steve McLendon (79AK), Bruce Linsey (79CF), Stephen Lee (79CW), and John Michalski (80AQ). I can't wait to see the next stab list, since these folks are sure to rise in the rankings. The shortest game listed (80IE) ended in a 2-way draw in 1904 with no player having been eliminated. The longest (79HE) was a short-deadline game that ran 23 gameyears and ended with Bob Osuch's win.

PLUGS. Not your run-of-the-mill frantic dipzine, REBUS SIC STANTIBUS contains one regular Dip game and one Grand Tournament variant, plus a Thomas Hardy poem, a player profile, and a couple of brief notes. A great cover illustration features a drawing from a WWI poster. Write to Drew McGee; PO Box 325, Bowling Green Sta.; Staten Island, NY 10301; and have a look for yourself...OK, so now I'm convinced that Jane Proskin and her zine PEEK are real. The second issue came this month with another little love note. Jane has quit using Jack Masters' mailing labels, probably since she's cut her mailing list severely. If you write her a nice letter and send a couple of 18¢ stamps ("Occupant"; PO Box 6824; Burbank, CA 91510) she might add your name to her list...Issue #37 of THE BUZZARD'S BREATH (yuck! what a name!) announced openings for Third Reich, En Garde, Source of the Nile, and Diplomacy. It also carries a number of other games, Third Reich among the most numerous. Mark Matuschak; Hinman Box 3224; Dartmouth College; Hanover, NH 03755 is the publisher of this 22-page zine that deserves a look. Send at least 2 stamps for a sample.

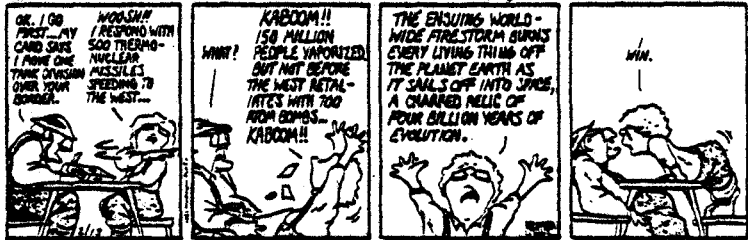

SUBS EXPIRING. Subs expire this issue for Fritz, Lew, Mercer, Ohlendorf, and Tinker. Issue #8 is the last for Boudon and Tatsch.

HOBBY CENSUS. It's not too late for publishers to send your mailing lists to Glenn Overby; 23096 Tawas; Hazel Park, MI 48030. He is compiling a census of subbers and needs this information by the Ides of April, so hurry.

GOLDEN FROG AWARDS. A special issue of Jack Masters' innovative zine BLACK FROG announced the winners of the 1980 Golden Frogs. Taking top honors for Zine of the Year was MURD'RING MINISTERS (Ron Brown/1528 El Sereno Pl./Bakersfield, CA 93304). EMHAIN MACHA (Michael Mills/1585 Quaker Rd./Macedon, NY 14502) won the award for Sophomore Zine of the Year. Taking the Frog for New Zine of the Year was LONE STAR DIPLOMAT [Thanks, Jack!]. Other frogs went to prominent hobby personalities: Bruce Linsey, Kathy Byrne, Allen Wells, and Lee Kendter, Sr. with honorable mention to Mark Berch and John Michalski. Highlighted events included the proliferation of fake zines and a fake national championship tournament, and the Caruso-Linsey Feud.

BLOOM COUNTY

COSMIC ENCOUNTER. BLACK FROG has openings for a test run of Jack Masters' postal version of this sf/negotiating game. Rules were published in BF #37, and are probably available for a first class stamp. Send two stamps and ask for a sample of the whole zine, which I highly recommend since subbers are guaranteed to find at least one or two surprises in the mailbox each month. The fact that Jack has been publishing for less than a year and is already up to issue #38 (or higher by the time you read this, most likely) should indicate something, so write to 25711 North Vista Fairways Drive, Valencia, CA 91355.

NMR INSURANCE. Boudon, C. & C. Cunningham, Daly, Ditter, Fritz, Giddings, Hail, Hamlin, Henry, Keith, Koehler, Luedi, Martin, Mayes, Peacock, Pierce, Porteny, Sampson, Scheifler, Schleinkofer, Sergeant, Stephens, Tatsch, Van Wie, & Williams.

STANDBYS. Donaldson, Fritz, Fuß, Gallagher, Grabar, Guajardo, Hancock, Hartman, Henry, Jewett, Kador, Keith, King, Langley, Larzelere, McLendon, McPherrin, Mills, Nichols, Olsen, Pierce, Ridenour, Sampson, Scheifler, Schleinkofer, Sergeant, Stevens, Tatsch, Van Wie, C. Williams, J. Williams, & Woodson.

MAILING LIST. Add: Herb Barents, 1142 S. 96th Ave, Z, Zeeland, MI 49464; Konrad Baumeister, Box 2231 N.S., Washington, DC 20057; Joe Gallagher, 4766 Maverick Way, Boise, ID 83709; Richard Reed, 414 W. Oak, El Segundo, CA 90245; Cindy Seelke, 6023 Fontenelle, Houston, TX 77035.

FREEBIES. I forgot to mention last issue that Allen King's sub was extended by one issue for his review of WARCON. The timely article (since it's tax time, you know, and money is on everyone's mind) by Hoto & Zeke earns four issues of LSD. And finally, con-

MARSEILLES: The people lined the docks and wharves of Marseilles today as the newly formed French Foreign Legion departed for Tunisia, the newly acquired French colony. The president was heard to say that this could be the start of a proud new tradition.

JOHN [D] to JOHN [K]: Do you realize that we've pushed two Diplomacy veterans out of the hobby?

LONDON: The new King of England has put out a call for mercy. He was heard to should, "And I can't even have their addresses to plea for restraint!"

LSD-LON: Sorry. You do now, don't you?

LONDON: As a precaution, the English crown jewels were transported to the United States aboard an American destroyer. With the Americans preaching neutrality, Britain faces a grim struggle. Where is Churchill when you need him? Long live the King (even though he already hopped on a boat for Ireland).

SMY-PAR: Not that way, your other east!

SMY-MOS: Take that, you dirty rat. Is this the end of Turkey?

LSD-SMY: Not just yet, it seems!

SMY-WORLD: Do you all plan to concede to Russia? Who will help me in my hour of need?

GREECE to COLD, CRUEL WORLD: How can you guys wipe out this poor Turk who makes phone calls when he's down to one center?

BER-PAR: Disarmament along the Franco-German border could be a positive & mutually beneficial idea at another time, another circumstance, but strategy & national interest dictate otherwise at this time. You seek to shift your attention & strength to the north, & there are already too many of us tripping over each other up there as it is. Larry, I guess this means war.

BER-ROM: Will you follow my lead? And please write; I worry so when I don't hear from you.

BER-MOS: I've always wanted to visit Sweden at this time of year, and I hope to make the trip this season. I won't be going to Edi as we discussed; that fleet is needed elsewhere. I do hope you understand.

BER-CON & VIE (in exile): I don't think you will see any French fleets heading east, and without them your chances of survival are nil. Isn't it a cruel and bitter world in which we live?

79HT GERMANY to 79HS: Hi guys, me again. Yeah, I've been doing all right over my way, but there's no challenge. You see, I write most of the press, and well, it gets tough to keep up a conversation with yourself for more than a year or so. So, if you don't mind, I'll just write for you guys.

79HT GERMANY to 79HS TURKEY: So what are you worried about? You have 9 centers and--oops. Sorry, wrong Turkey. Hang in there!

79HT GERMANY to 79HS: Watch out for the new Austrian. I hear he's known for his appalling greed. (I know: booooo!)

LSD: He means APPALLING GREED, obtainable from the Austrian for a stamp or two--or maybe a pledge of friendship?

success. This solution is extremely simple, sensible, and workable. All four of the other Great Powers remaining must concede to Italy. The reasons and benefits are manifold. 1) This game would be immortalized if you concede to a 2-center Italy, it would be remembered and talked about forever. 2) Peace would make everyone happy? 3) It would save the rest of you from a boring 4-way draw. 4) If it doesn't save you from that, it would save some of you from embarrassing defeat. 5) If Italy wins no one loses? 6) If you don't concede I must release the terrible mite of the Italian armed forces upon each of you in turn. Because of these and other lesser reasons too numerous to mention, I urge each of you to concede to Italy.

VATICAN-EUROPE: The Pope asks the heads of Europe (France, Germany, & Italy) to declare a Holy Crusade against the Terrible Turk. If the Russian Orthodox Army would join this crusade, the Pope is willing to recognize the Patriarch of Moscow as an equal and create a dual Papacy for a united Roman-Eastern Christendom. First, however, Ivan must help destroy the Ottoman infidel.

FLORENCE-MUNICH: Hope all of this crap appeases your insatiable desire for press.

MILAN-VERSAILLES: The King wishes the French Foreign Legion in Naf well and invites them to Naples, Tunisia, or any other place these Turkish mongrels are hatching from.

SYRACUSE-KIEL: We have nearly succeeded in luring the Turks into our capital. We urgently need information as to how this will advance them to their doom. Please rush. We wish to implement this phase of our strategy as soon as possible.

MUN-THE SKY ABOVE: Why me, Lord? All these conditionals have burned out me poor brain.

LSD-MUN: Maybe the separation of seasons will ease the strain somewhat.

BER-LSD: Hey, you write press! Why not join this game? Oh...I see. Can it be cured?

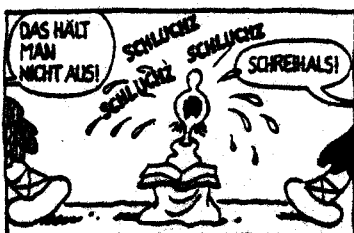

LVN ON THE WAY TO PRU-MOS: Sorry. It must have been my mommy!

ROMA-BERLIN: Mercenaries would've been nice but it appears they will not now be needed to help combat COA Bonstricters that have invaded the Italian capital. The final assault is being turned back, and Roma will be finally rid of the venomous creatures.

LSD: Apparently the pesky critters have infested other capitals as well.

TUNIZ: The recently released criminal El Zappo has assumed command of the Italian 1st Army now based in Tunisia, the culmination of a series of events that can only be labeled as an overnight sensation. The story, just picked up by the European Press Zervize, has already received much attention in French newspapers. (Those French are such fine journalists!)

The new general's story began when he was accidentally released from a Tunisian prison, where he, as an Italian citizen, was being held for obzzenity charges. One of the newly arrived Italian officers mistook El Zappo for a former classmate at the Venice School of Illiteracy; and upon his release, he fell in with a group of Tunisian Nationalists, organizing that group into a national front. One of the group's demands was the changing of the name Tunis to Tuniz.

The major stepping stone in the takeover occurred when the troops of the Italian 1st Army refused to fight against El Zappo. He had become rather popular with the troops for his extravagant exploits and soon rose in the ranks to take command last week. The new general is a dashing character, with great charisma and confidence. He bruzhez off his notorious past as immature prankz; he has now become a member of the establishment class of zozisty. He considerz himself politically indifferent, a moderate if anything, but Italian government zourzez indicate the government considerz him a threat to national security, because of his past and his stupendous rise to power.

In a personal interview, we did ask him who he would best consider as hobby mascot. He admitted his ignorance of the matter, but upon looking through the list of candidates, he said he liked none of them, as none had even the decency to have a Z in their name.

LZD: What about Caruzo?

ALGIERS: Not wishing to grovel too much, heads of state from all over Europe are sending congratulations to Franz (Fred) Joseph through Ambassador D'Annunci on the Emperor's extraordinary successes in 1901. No reports are forthcoming but it is assumed that the King of Austria & Hungary took the field himself despite his advanced age to teach the Turks and their toadies the Bulgars a lesson in war. I, too, would like to extend my hardest congratulations on your amazing feat, aardvark. Or better yet, armadillo ('cause we all is playing in Texas, y'all). An announcement of union between Austria and the newly proclaimed Italian protectorate is expected soon from bargaining tables here in Algiers.

With four 12" guns and eight 7.6" guns on a 15,000 ton hull she is truly the ultimate in modern naval design. Leading the new fleet is Commodore Manny Medieros, with Rear Admiral Max Gerard advising.

BRUSSELS: The King has called for French assistance in resisting the English attempts to end his sovereignty

TIRANE: Only a feeble-minded idiot would aid the Turks against Austria and Russia, Tsar. And in this game only Nicholas is such a man. On the other hand, only Italy could act so against their own self-interest, Sir, Emperor of all Russians; it may be that you are right. I would not trust him, or you for that matter!

TIRANE (part two): The Sultan of Turkey was arrested today as he attempted to leave the country with the kidnapped niece of King Zog. He protested, saying his armies required his direction, but was compelled to leave control of the advance to reconquer the Balkans and reinslave this free nation founded by Iskander Bey. Naturally his armies disintegrated at the news of his arrest. Just goes to show anyone can be cajoled and bribed, scum!

Insults definitely didn't work. Begging, crying, wheedling, and even threatening weren't too successful either. The crowd was being herded out the back door and my fellow students were oblivious to my withdrawal-induced wails.

The next thing I knew a big-armed bouncer in a Ralph Lauren suit grabs me by the collar and tosses me into the pavement. "Same to you, pal," I shouted, as I headed back to the library.

I was at home during Christmas break with nothing to do for a day, so I spent the morning reading the Milwaukee Journal. One day, on page A26, across from the weather reports, an ad for Heritage Savings announced that I could be the proud owner of a battery-powered TUSH-CUSH with only a $500 deposit. The amazing gadget would warm me from the bottom while I earned 5 1/2% on my money. I hurried down to Heritage and stood in line, waiting for my TUSH-CUSH. The guy in front of me asked the teller to make out a check for $2000. The teller asked him what he needed the check for... And that's about all I can remember.

Doctors at County General didn't have a hard time reviving me, but the therapy took a few weeks. It seems, and this took the full two weeks to deduce, that this guy needed the full $2000 to pay for tuition, room, board, books, car payments, stereo payments, and alcohol at Rutgers for the spring semester. The doctors think that I hit the floor right around "books", but I'm pretty sure I heard "car payments."

I'm better now. I think. You see, I get dizzy every time I look at my tuition bills for the last two semesters at Georgetown and subtract Rutgers' bills. But then I think, who needs a new stereo, vacations, a BMW, and a stock portfolio? Guess.

The call came about 10:30 pm the night of the Inauguration. My friends had come down Saturday for the festivities and were now visiting some people they had met on a previous road trip here. While they were gone, I took the time out to ruminate on the work I'd missed, the hangovers I'd had and the money I'd spent since their arrival four days before. So as I struggled down the hall to the pay phone, I was somewhat upset to have been disturbed in the middle of some rather pleasurable dark thoughts.

"Yeah, whadda ya want?"

"Konrad, this is Brian. Me and Murph are at the Tombs with Gwen and Suzy. Why don't you come over and split a pitcher or three with us? Gwen's buying."

As a Milwaukee-raised German, it was an offer I could not refuse without abandoning the remaining shreds of my self-esteem. "Be right over," I said.

When I finally arrived, I saw the four of them sitting around a table designed for two. They were well into their third pitcher and a debate over whether Ronald Reagan was the best or worst thing that has ever happened to America. I was in my element so I sat down and joined in.

Several hours and pitchers later--after settling a few of the great questions of man and discussing a few incidents of the night before--the lights came on. Taking our cue, we called for the check.

"SIX DOLLARS A PITCHER? I've only got $25 on me," Gwen exclaimed.

"You've got to be kidding. Last time I was here a pitcher only cost $4, maybe $4.50 tops," added Brian.

"Last time you drank here was last week," I observed.

Anyway, by reaching deep into our respective pockets we eventually managed to raise enough cash to pay the bill and to keep Gwen from blowing her food money for the remainder of the week. On the way out, Brian pulled me over,

"Konrad, that was the last of my money. It's been an expensive weekend. Can you lend me enough to get home?"

Brian is a good friend, so I didn't think twice before telling him that I would. After that, Brian and Murph went to get a nightcap and I went back to my room.

As I lay in my bed, trying to fall asleep before they came back and started talking, I was delighted with the plethora of brand-new dark thoughts that I had to savor and enjoy. Life was good.

Scene: Milwaukee, 1 1/2 years ago or so.

It was my first date with Amy. She was cute and I never thought she would say yes. She did. Believe me, that was the nicest thing that happened to me in a while. Since it was Homecoming and I really wanted to impress her, I decided to go all out--after checking my bank account, of course.

Remembering all the scorch marks on my button-downs, I figured that it would be a whole lot smarter to get them dry-cleaned. Not stopping there, I sent my suit and tie out too.

That set me back $10.

Then, a friend and I went out to get some booze. Since neither of us had any idea what our dates drank, we bought a little of everything.

Another $40 bites the dust.

Robot Logic

Finally, James Woodson also sent in a logic puzzler which we reprint from Martin Gardner's The Three Robots of Professor Tinker, which you should see to check your answer.

Professor Lyman Frank Tinker, head of the Artificial Intelligence Laboratory at Stanford U., was the 21st century's top designer of robots. One afternoon, for a seminar test, he brought to the classroom 3 female robots.

"One of these girls," said Tinker, "is programmed always to speak truly. Another is programmed to lie. The third is programmed so she sometimes speaks truly, sometimes falsely, on a random basis. Your problem is this. In how few questions can you identify the truther, the liar, and the somtimer?"

The second smartest student in the class asked the following 3 questions:

1. To the lady of the left he said, "Who sits next to you?" The robot answered: "The truther."
2. To the center lady he said, "Who are you?" The robot answered: "The somtimer."
3. To the lady on the right he said, "Who sits next to you?" The robot answered, "The liar."

From the 3 answers the student correctly identified all three robots. How? Then figure out how the smartest student in the class solved the problem.

BER-EUROPE: "My what a herd of bloodthirsty rascals I have encountered," muttered the Kaiser after seeing the overwhelming response to his mercenary ad. The Kaiser demands cash in advance from those still interested. When it gets down to it, Wilhelm believes it's better to have 1,000,000 marks in the Bank of Berlin, than 10,000,000 in Paris, London, Vienna, or Moscow. What we can't figure out is how to move to Bur, Sil, Pru, Bal, Swe, Nth, and Hel, while supporting Eng and Fra into Bel at the same time. Not to mention helping Austria into War, Russia into Swe, (but don't forget England), and France into Ven. That's a helluva lot to ask a 5-center Germany to carry out in one game year fellers!

PARIS: The city is having a joyous celebration in appreciation of the settlement of all strikes. The striking parties finally agreed that due to the political climate of Europe that Paris and France must not let minor squabbles come between its citizens. A government spokesman was quoted as saying, "Now that the strikes have been resolved, France can turn its attention to the major matter at hand, the destruction of the European power with imperialistic designs on France." When questions as to which power he was referring to, the spokesman said, "That's for me to know and for you to find out."

FRANCE-AUSTRIA: Look, unless you can send me a letter saying something different than the same thing the last two have said, don't bother, ok?

FRANCE-ITALY: Welcome to the greatest state in the US, the Lone Star State, Texas.

IBERIA: Now that the French forces have brought order to the Iberian peninsula, the French fleet in Spain has been dispatched to quell yet another disturbance, albeit a more serious one. It is expected that the French will maintain a military presence in Iberia throughout the spring and summer, however.

FRANCE-LSD: Will you be going to NanCon?

LSD-FRANCE: Probably. Also DalCon, which is sooner, in early June. See you there?

THREE-MINUTE DIPLOMACY

This Dip variant appeared in the first dipzine I ever subbed to, OBSESSION. Appearing in issue #4 (someime in 1973, I believe), it was authored by Paul Boozer and Carl Bailey.

There can be any number of players, as long as the number is odd.

Each player is allowed one vote. He may cast it for any of the other players. Any player receiving two or more votes is eliminated from the game.

Where there are only two players remaining, those who have been eliminated will vote for the player they want to lose. The player receiving the least number of votes is the winner.

PLEASE send me your Best/Worst Texas Jokes. I only received a couple that fall into that category, the rest are mediocre and will be forwarded to the appropriate receptacle. And hurry, Al Pearson is depending on us!

ENDGAME STATEMENTS--

BLACK & BLUE & RED ALL OVER
 by Doug Tatsch (England)

I would like to start by thanking Mike Conner for GMing the game and providing LSD as a forum for its madness. Mike's job was the most difficult of all, dealing with 7 highly emotional, neurotic, and paranoid players week in, week out. Although there were some rough spots, on the whole I found Mike to be fair and conscientious. I would also like to thank all my fellow participants for an engaging experience.

The format of the game balanced the intense, verbal contact of FTF Dip with sufficient negotiation periods for in-depth consideration of strategy and tactics. Unfortunately, last-minute negotiations and deals were the norm and often made the night before the deadline frantic, at best.

As a player I did not find the game too time-consuming. It was no more so than one or two postal games, although the phone game progressed much more quickly. It was nice to finish a 12-year game in 6 months, as opposed to a postal game of 2 years or more.

As for the game, I am please to have formed an A-G alliance in 1908 which stalemated Austria. Til then, A & R stood each other off in the east and moved westward without effective opposition. In fact, by 1903 A had created a power vacuum in the Med that practically guaranteed his participation in the endgame.

The early collapse of F & I decreed that the surviving western powers, E & G, combine to limit Robert's expansion in the west. Yet in 1904 I found myself at war with G. I was forced to ally with R to survive, but in so doing, allow R to grow dangerously large.

Austria never pushed his advantage in the Iberian bottleneck, probably because I repeatedly promised to stab R when the time was right. It was right in 1908. As G began to collapse in 1906-7 under E and R attacks a German fleet got behind Russian lines and invested Stp. In 1908, R turned his forces eastward to deal with this, and I couldn't resist the shiny backside. Once the stab was made, G had to ally with me to finish R off and stalemate A. The game was drawn in 1912 with R still alive, a recognition of Terry's spirited defense of Sev against Austria.

Of course, there were a few other costs--the tickets to the dance, flowers, boot polish, dinner for two downtown and gas both ways, to mention a few.

Write off another 80 bananas.

Anyway, we danced all night and we got a little drunk. After the dance we went back to my place and ...talked until long after sunrise. As she got up to leave she told me, "You know, you made me feel like a million bucks tonight."

The only problem--I thought--was that was just about what it cost.

He pulled back on the plunger and sent the metal ball up its runway and onto the playing field. It bounced around the bumpers for a little while collecting small amounts of points for the local pinball wizard. Finally, it came down on the right flipper where he carefully cradled it and started talking.

"You know, I can remember when a lousy quarter would buy you three 5-ball games. If you were any good, you could make that last forever." He sent the ball back into play. "Now, all you get is one lousy--agh!--3-ball game for your money. That doesn't last but a coupla minutes. Shit! I lost it.

He sent a replacement on its way. "I know that the new games got all kinds of electronic sounds and the like, but I still feel like I'm gettin' ripped off. The digital numbers and the fact that you get more points--C'mon, get that target--Yeah!--doesn't nearly make up for what you lose. Yeah, you get more points, but the pop goes up too. Damn! Death arc!" His second ball went down the outside left gutter.

The third and final ball was launched. "It just ain't pinball, ya know. I mean it costs me 70 damn cents to buy a pack of Newports. I mean Christ! Candy bars are getting smaller and the prices are going up. A 6-pack of Bud is what? $2.70 All right! Got it --double bonus! You sure can't win. My work/study went up, sure, but only a dime an hour. That won't pay for more than a coupla beers and a game of pinball. DAMN!" He slammed the glass hard as his last ball disappeared down the middle. "C'mon, match!" he commanded. There was no sound. Only the "Game Over" light changed on the board. "Damn."

His anger spent, the wizard walked over to his coat. "You know, the way prices are going is sorta like that pinball over there. First you get bounced around a little bit and mebbe ya score a few points, but eventually--eventually, man--you end up in the hole. Winning is just a matter of losing less quickly than everybody else."

This is just my general view of the game. The intricate web of intrigue and treachery woven by all the players would make lengthy reading. There is no time or space for that here, so I will consign the LSDEMO Phone Game to history. Thanks, one & all.

THE GM GETS AN EARFUL

by Mike Conner

To Doug's comments I would like to add that I would like to congratulate him and the composite Germany for their respective recoveries from temporary setbacks to build their nations into forces able to stop the Austrian advance. Also credit should go to Terry for sticking with what may have seemed a losing cause.

GMing a phone game proved to require a lot of time. With one move season a week, it entailed contact with all players twice for receiving and reporting moves, twice more for retreats and/or builds each week. As GM I needed to be available for a given period of time (morning hours before noon on deadline days) to receive orders. When I couldn't observe the "office hours" once or twice, it fouled up the rhythm of the game, as ad hoc solutions were found. The lack of clearly understood houserules, especially regarding NMR procedure, and the search for reasonable ways to handle problems as they came up created some difficulties. More explicit HRs, or more developed ones could save grief for future phone GMs and players.

Though in the last month or so the game seemed to drag on and on, I find now that I miss the Tuesday deadlines hanging over my head. But will I GM another? Not on your life! Congratulations to all the drawers, and good luck in future wars.
