John McCallum asks about the ruling on the above problem. By the system being developed in MISKATONIC UNIVERSITY, where underlined orders fail, and parentheses mark the location of the unit, the tentative solution to the problem, as it would be resolved in M.U. has been given. It was suggested in Brobdignag that the A War might cut the support given it by SIL. We question whether the movement of a unit supported in place might render the support invalid...perhaps a more subtle point has been missed...

James Shugrin (oh, how one thrills to patronise the high and mighty) wonders in THE HIGH LIVER, #4 if a double attack might be used as a nasty defense -

GERMANY A (NIE) TO HOL
A (HEL) TO HOL

ENGLAND F (Nths) TO HOL

As far as I'm concerned, this is a perfectly legal trick. I even got away with it once in GRAUSTARK. In my 5 position games, except for 19650, its use will not run one afoul of Rule #4, either.

MISKATONIC UNIVERSITY still claims the prize for being the dippy journal with the most spelling errors and typos per square millimeter than any other publication in the field!!!
