The Spring, 1908 orders for this game will be due in on the 16th of July. Publication before that date will be impossible due to my National Guard commitment.

LUSITANIA two

Again, this game is plagued by missed orders. Those players who have managed to submit moves are given a tremendous advantage; they would probably do quite well to note the patterns of missed moves to predict areas of possible reduced opposition to their advances...

THE ERROR here was that I neglected to note last time that Austria was entitled to build a unit for their occupation of Rumania... DEADLINE FOR SPRING, 1804 ORDERS IS JULY 16!

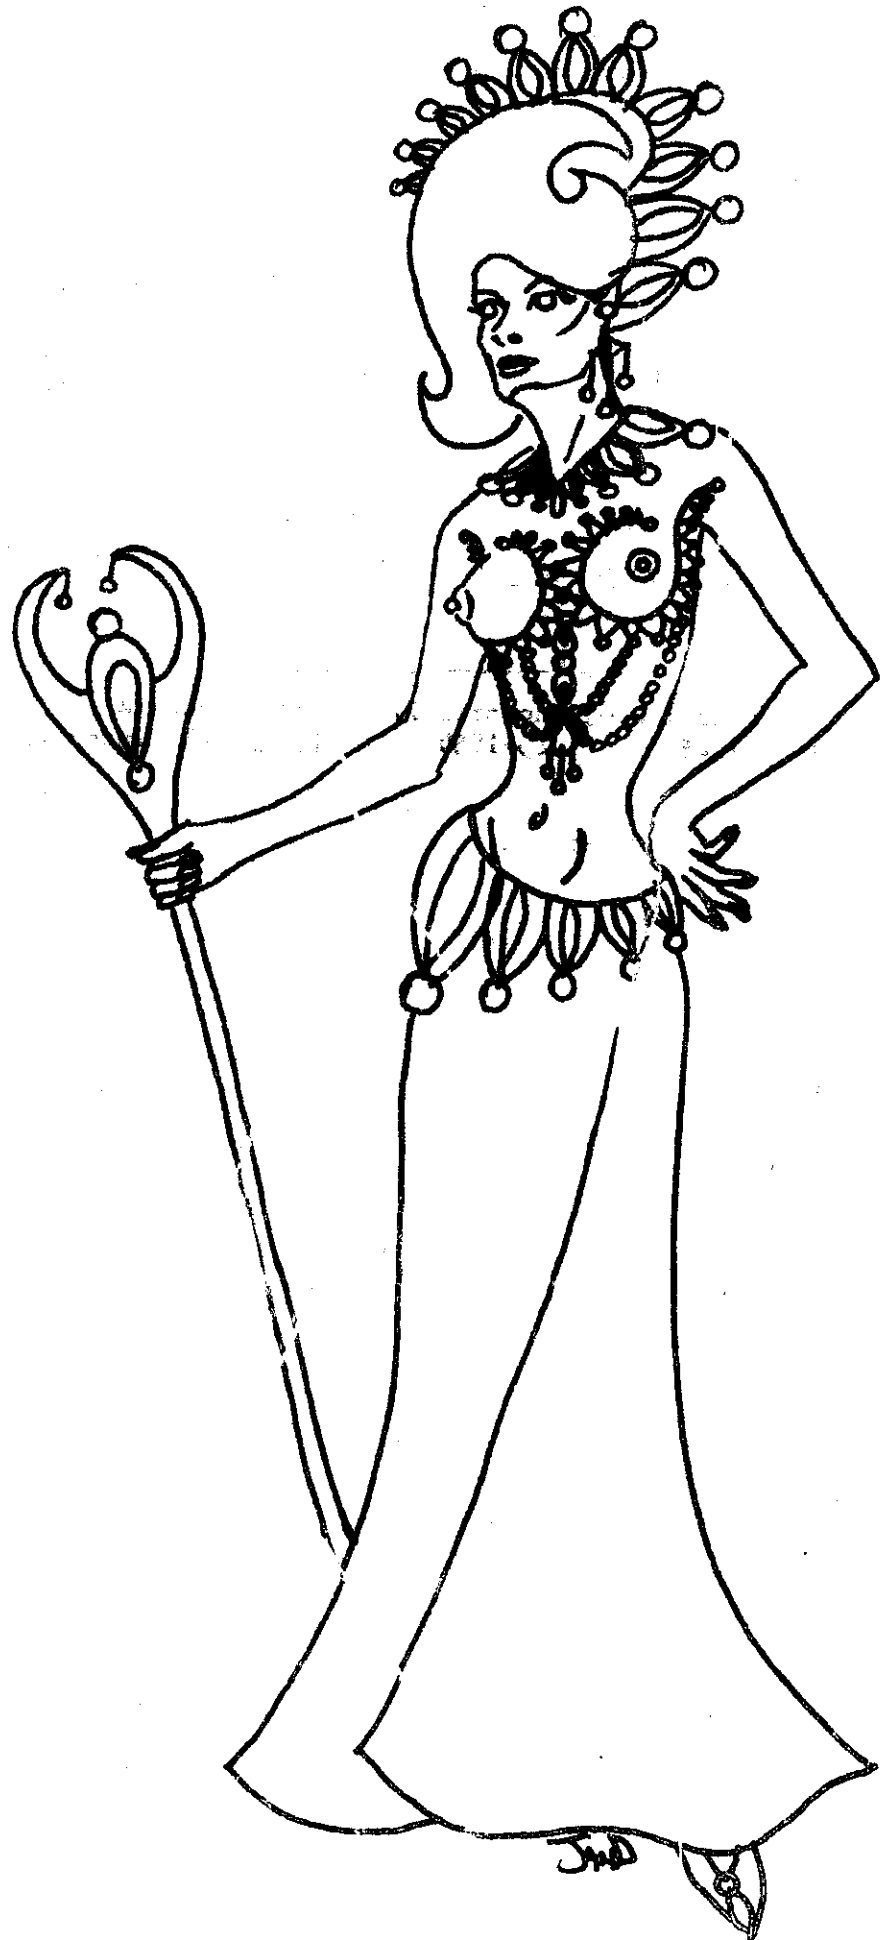

MADRID (13 December 1901): Her Imperial Majesty, Lucrezia III, Empress of the French, Queen of Spain, Duchess of Florence and of Modena, &c. &c., today appealed to the world for peace. "Let all nations lay down their arms and live in harmony and understanding," her majesty said. Her speech was made at the 3rd annual Hispanic Winter Feastive and Grand Orgy, at which several German prisoners of war were being fed to the lions.

SZEKESFEHERVAR (15 December, 1901): Hungarian Emperor Arpad II, in his usual stunning fashion, has again astounded the world. Today the Emperor announced that He has, for some time, now, been updating the Hindu concept of yoga and greatly improving the expected results of employing such a technique. Said the emperor, "The only thing wrong with the Hindus is that they were not Hungarians. Otherwise, they would have known how to complete this fascinating work. As it is, they stopped just when they were getting onto the right track." He then demonstrated the fantastic endurance that He has developed at His summer home here. Allowing Himself to be tied to a stake, He directed five companies of lancers to thrust at Him with spears at a full gallop. The commanders of these companies protested for love of the Emperor. The four new commanders complied with His wishes. This was followed by three fusillades by a firing squad, spread-eagle-and-staking with trampling by a wild bull, and self-immolation with Texaco Sky Chief. After this ordeal, during which half the observing populace fainted or got sick, the Emperor burst his bonds, stood up, and bawled. He immediately excused himself for such rude behaviour. As further proof of his invincibility, He walked over to the bull and, with one sharp blow of his left hand, reduced the 1,000 lb. animal to 4,000 4-on hamburgers. Then, for an encore, he bit in half consecutively, yet, 3,118 cavalry sabres (with scabbards). By this time, the sun had attempted to set, but—you guessed it, the benevolent monarch, with a few well-chosen words, again placed it at the most comfortable level of the sky, where it remained for the remainder of the performance. Long live the Emperor!

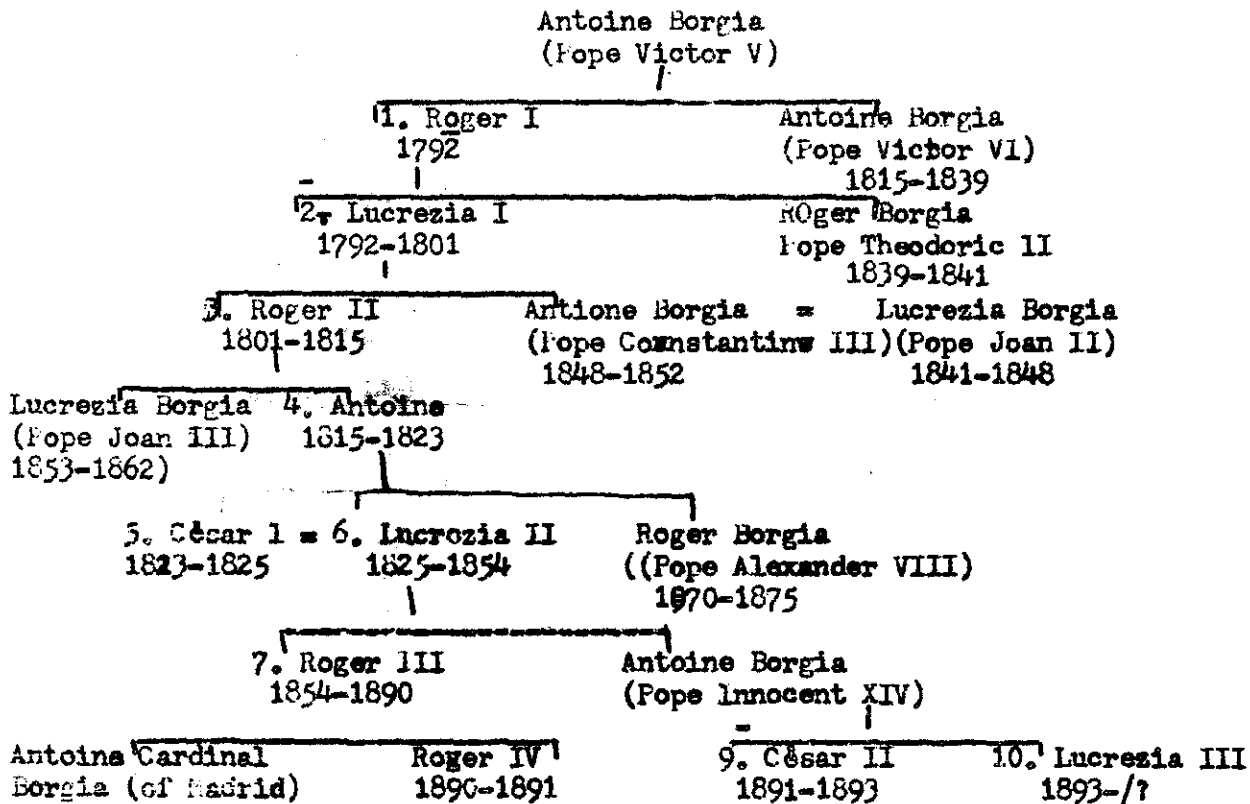

MILKATONIC UNIVERSITY, PRAGUE (16 December, 1901) Well, here we go again! No sooner do we relocate 10,000 Hungarian refugees, when we get another 10,000 of them. Why? Well, how would you like it if, after a nice, rousing feast day you decided to take the rest of the ceremonies off to do a little private celebrating, get all ready for bed, and find it impossible to...uh...sleep, because the stupid emperor hasn't let the sun go down yet. Lunacy. Well, let him try that stupid spell on a good Bohemian sun! It just doesn't work so easily, because we Bohemians aren't such submissive tribal types any more. Nyeah.

PARIS (25 December 1901): Her Imperial Majesty, Lucrezia III, today presided over the 39th annual Christmas Party and Supreme Orgy. The Supreme Oneandonly Genuine Acceptnosubstitutes Absolute Pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church, Pope Innocent XIV, also attended the celebration.

Paris (3 January, 1902): Innocenty Brown, the respected Parisian publishing house, has just announced the publication of Prof. Gaudia Borgia's new work, The Imperial Borgias of France and Rome, which traces the fantastic Borgia family (to which the professor is related) from their rise during the Revolution to the present day. It recounts the glorious story of the day in 1792 when Roger Borgia entered the assembly at the head of his regiment, deposed the republic, and proclaimed Himself Emperor of the French. It is sad to think that this great man was poisoned that same year, by party or parties unknown yet; yet he was succeeded by his glorious daughter, the insuperable Lucrezia I (1792-1801), who lived to see her grandfather, the wise old Antoine Borgia, elected Pope as Victor II (in 1799 after the death of Pius VI). Since that memorable day, when the Vth and XIVth Cavalry Legions insured the neutrality of the Papal elections, every single Pope has been of the Borgia family: Victor V, (Antoine Borgia, 1799-1815, Victor VI, (Antoine Borgia, son of Victor V, 1815-1839) Theodorio II (Roger Borgia, brother of Lucrezia I and son of Roger I, 1839-1841), Joan II (Lucrezia Borgia, daughter of Theodorio II, 1841-1848) and all the rest (may they rest in peace!). Lucrezia I

... proceeded by her son ... with Austria and ~~Italy~~ Russia which has done so much to preserve the peace of Europe for nearly a century, Our readers may be interested in the genealogy of the Golden Borgia which is given below:

Well, well, well...Look who just missed some moves! The only decisive action seems to have been the Anglo-French conquest of Kiel, but, also, there have been some important strategic shifts of strength...

DEADLINE FOR FALL, 1906, orders is 16 July press section and typing practice page...

FROM THE NEWSDESK OF RAINFO ROMANY, ABOARD THE GIPSIE FLEET: A surprise announcement by international film producer Hubert Agnew has put an end to genocidal riots cascading in the wake of the recent blockade of the Pacific by the units of the U.S. 93rd Grand Old Fleet of the Republic. Revealed at last was the true story behind the incident provoking the closure of the ocean to all Chinese forced trade. While it remains uncontested that the Overlords of Han in Peking had ordered the mass synchronized stamping that had sunk the continental United States for 48 hours May 8th by isotatic rebound, the movie mogul disclosed that his studio had made the action a condition of a recently signed agreement with China concerning the destruction of thirty thousand hours of denigrating Charlie Chen pictures owned by Penumbra Pictures and on the verge of release to television. Explanation for the unusual clause was the necessity of imitating North America as part of the background shots for the studio's as yet unreleased spectacular, 'The Man With the Gadolinium Guts', based on the Ivan Flemingo classic. Actual shots were required rather than special effects mock-ups due to the cinema verite style of the film. The plot of the new James Deacon picture, 42nd of the line, reportedly concerns a nefarious scheme by the master villain Smerdyalov, a friend of Felder Dostoyevsky, to blow up the Earth in a gigantic insurance fraud. Arch assassin Pistols Sestologgia is dispatched to do in British agent double-crosser, but must pursue an unending series of doubles through Berlin, Addis Ababa, Buenos Aires, and the other major world capitals. A variety of international stars portray the imitation Deacones, including Johann Carradine, Everett Dirksen, and Natalia Matamoras. James Dean makes a rare cameo appearance as head of British Intelligence (MI-Blue). Directors include Frederico Fallopi, Engren Bergensholm, Steaks Polized, and Davidson Merrimack, each of whom collaborated with scriptwriter Len Carter on their segments before final rewrite by executive producer Iwan Allen. The finished print of the film will last an hour and a quarter and go on the road in early September.

In Rome, restoration of the Papacy by Emperor Goliath I seems imminent after a series of natural disasters occasioned apparently by the refusal of the imperator to re-open the office of Roman Catholic Pontiff, closed down under Ottoman rule. Still recuperating from the plague of catagles which followed the eruption of the Apian Way, the monarch indicated revision of his policy concerning the status of the Pope may be in sight. Final word is scheduled to come before next month's invasion by a horde of arisonified frai planning to clog drains and back up sewers throughout the capital city. Combined with the previous transmutation of all wine in the region to ammonia and the slow decomposition of all living organic matter within a radius of twelve miles of the Imperial Palace, the climatru effects have been predicted to fall "in the medium to high lethal range", according to the Turko-Roman Ministry of Pollution. Plans for restoration of the Vatican, which has turned into a Hyberian Legionaire Post and sacked during the organization's ~~unofficial~~ jubilee by a group of ~~ambulant~~ ~~Laundian~~ foreign exchange students, have been made by the Office of Internal Sanctification, according to unofficial sources. No comment has been received from the College of Cardinals, in session at military confinement in the Zero-Zero Island Rehabilitory Colony for the Soccally ~~infective~~ since the Goliardi take-over
