One for the Road: As I was sitting at my desk one night, a pleasing and very tempting aroma slowly enticed me to run into the kitchen and see if I could grab a bite of what smelled so good. Yes, my wife said, I could taste it if I liked. Guess what it was...? She had a can of Alpo Dog Food sitting on a burner warming for her Pekingnese (named "Peke-a-boo") to eat. DISAPPOINTMENT to the extreme!!! It wasn't bad though.....

Think about this one: My wife's dog, Peke-a-boo, sleeps with his tongue sticking half an inch out of his flat face. Well, so what you say???? Well, after an hour or two, his tongue dries out and is like a piece of rock - the poor dog can't get his tongue in or out and looks ridiculous until things open up. Wård little doggie..... Attention- Gentlemen, I must apologize for continually making the many idiot mistakes that I make in your game. Its most likely to be because I usually type your game last and because I try too hard to make yours right the first time for a change. I will do better if the game lasts long enough //Errr..... I didn't mean you couldn't hurry the thing along @ave.....//

CAMPING TRIP: Eric from Ct and some friends plus me went on a bit of a camping trip last weekend - it got down to the 20's and we really froze. However, with the anti-freeze we kept sipping, things weren't as bad as they could have been. Next time, though, I think I'll sleep on some hot rocks for a little warmth. Thanks for the good times, Rick.

The Press:

1972-DM

Somehow Far in The Future- "Warren --" gasps one of the two technicians carefully watching the screens, "who the hell is that?" He motions toward the curved screen labelled #8. Behind the verdant undergrowth on the screen, a shapely figure in skirt and blouse can be recognised. From time to time the viewer is obscured by a leaf waving before the "camera".

"Hey, you found her!" calls his companion loudly. "Somebody call Caltson we found them!"

"Answer my bloody first question" grunts his pale partner between clenched teeth.

"That's Anita McClusky" responds Warren, puzzled by the others inquietude. "I'd know that ass anywhere"

The door opened and Caltson walked in quietly. A bit of sweat showed on his balding pate in the dim light. "You found them?" he whispers.

"That's about right" snaps the first. "I found them" And throwing a switch, he illuminates a second screen, showing two figures in modern dress standing in a rain-forest clearing, arguing.

"Hey --" cries Warren bewilderedly, "that's the same ass, er, girl!"

"Two views of the same thing?" guesses Caltson.

"They're two entirely different things"

And so they were, for while in the first screen the man and the girl continued to argue, in the second, the girl had stepped behind a tree, pulled up her skirt and squatted...

"Turn that off" orders the older man, interrupting Warren and partner.

"Well, what the hell is it, then Bennett?" demands Warren. "Two views a minute or two apart?" Bennett motions silently to the two gages on his control panel representing the two screens. The numbers are the same.

"Two Anita McCluskys?" gasps Warren

"And presumably two Steve Burtons"

"How the" (to be continued, undoubtedly)

GERMANY- Prince Adam announced the formation of the Germanic Dukedom of Vichy (which will include Marseilles, Gascony, and Burgundy). His next boy scout project will be the recreation of the Kingdoms of Normandy. That's good work for a 7-month old boy!

1974-CT

VIENNA* If the Italian player had been more judicious he would have realized that he was in no real danger from my little habit. Last time I did not so move, and he can observe the result. He is still in no real danger, but he now has two units virtually useless, save to protect his Venice. //Play it again, Sam....?//

PARIS to BERLIN DAILY NEWS--- What kind of rag is that? The Serbian ideal?? You know what your "Serbian ideal" is? ... It's a bunch of skinny guys wearing fez's sitting around smoking water pipes while you've been long gone.

BERLIN PRESS- The English are coming, the English are coming!!!!

PARIS to ROMA--- The French Republic cannot understand why our Italian neighbors keep attacking France! What have we ever done to you? Let's talk about some cooperation! Eh, heh,heh,ha,ha,ha,ho,ho,ho,hee,hee,hee... Sound familiar? Tell the Pope he's not "Pious" (hee,hee), and that he should go piss up a rope. Ho,ho,ho,ho,ho,ho,.....

PARIS--- The Italian emissary has offered peace to France. In return the Italian Government will settle for Marseilles, Paris, Brest, Spain, Portugal, etc.,etc. France is considering the offer.

ANKARA: The Sultan today announced plans to introduce a little Turkish culture and refinement into the southern regions of France. "Since France obviously cannot get this from Italy, we will do this simply as a goodwill gesture to promote peace between our two peoples".

Imagine! A harem in that dirty bordello once known as Marseilles! PARIS to VIENNA--- I sympathize. However, I'm about to satisfy my urge to eat pizza. I think you should control your urge for the same. You're right, the yellow hordes can't be trusted. I wouldn't give a plugged nickel for your position right now. Don't say I didn't warn you! Look south foolish man! Look south, there's your maker.

PARIS to ROMA--- If I make the sign of the cross,... will you go away?

So much for the press. Well, the little quiz in last issue seems to have stirred the pot, so to speak. About five or six of you sent in your copy while the rest were split in two groups: the first group did not even see the thing (yes, you Ron) because they don't appreciate my typing it up while the second group berated my taste and manhood for having put it in the zine. Okay, thanks for the comments both ways. I am happy so long as you aren't apathetic. For a reply to all of you on the quiz, "If you liked it - fine - it's my zine; if you didn't like it - fine - it's still my zine."

Hmmmmmm, it seems that I can't find anything small enough to put at the bottom of this page. So, I'll just talk (oh, no!). Oh, JHF... I couldn't get to NYC because I've got a semi-new job now. I can't take any time off unless I give plenty of notice so someone can be transferred to take my place will keep trying though.

This is going to be a very short issue I think. I haven't had very much time to dig for a new set of cartoons or anything special.

You guys can cut off that little notice on page 4 and it makes a great decoration on a neighbor's front door.

Terry Knowles has sent me a lot of good cartoons for the future issues and I'm looking forward to using them.

JH Fleming had thought he might do some things for the zine but I'm not sure he can still find time. Things are getting a bit dull in P&S and I'm looking for something new. Any ideas?????

So that's it until next issue. Sorry if this one was a little stuffy and short but I'm beat quite frankly.

Y'all be good,
MIKE

There are no new game openings or subscriptions available at the time. There will be no new openings in the future the way things look presently. Good luck in your games!!!

BUT THERE'S ONE SMALL CATCH
LEYLAND, ENGLAND—An elderly dentist who died last November left $132,000 to his 47-year-old secretary. The conditions of the bequest were revealed recently when the will was officially published: For five years, the woman must "never use any lipstick or any other make-up of any kind whatsoever—apart from clear nail varnish—and wear no jewelry such as rings, earrings, necklaces, and never go out with men on her own, or with a party of men. . . ."
