PRESS:

HO-GAME: My zip code is 94703 NOT 4703 as printed last time. ((This typer has trouble printing the "q" key; I tripled checked for it but failed.))
I also live on a "Way" not an Avenue, though the difference eludes me. ((I think Ave's get more traffic, while Ways tend to dead end quickly, but I'm guessing. Agate is just Agate, it does a little bit of everything.))
AUS-ITA: We are a nation of purpose and determination.
ENG-GER: Am I mistaken, or are you about to be popped like a zit? ((Don't get any on the mirror.))
TEA-ICELAND: Don't razz France, he's doing fine.
ENG-RUS: Ready to play some hardball?
DATELINE BELFAST: At 0600 hours, under the curtain of darkness, IRA relief boats began rescue operations removing beleaguered Austrian troops from Norwegian soil in order that they may fight another day against the mad Protestant English dogs. ((Austrians are Catholic?)) NEWFANE-HO: What I've heard (on the radio) of Joe Jackson's latest sounds like a return to the angry sarcastic first album, Joe. Somewhat more political(?) but I like it.
HO-TI: "HoDe Doe" joke? Whatever could that have to do with me?
TI-HO: I read the "I-" as "To" such as Ho to Ti, and Ti to Ho, and I flashed on an old joke where HoDeDoe is the main phrase; unfortunately it's racist so I won't print it. I thought everyone knew it; ah, that's what I get for flashing.
TOBIN: Sting is a wonker((?)). You may quote me on that.
HO-GAME: Does anyone out there really believe the San Francisco Giants current success? I don't ((Oh yeah? Well you're a wonker!)), but that's because I come from L.A. originally. ((L.A.?! Hack, Gag, Puke! But hey, you got to love those kids!))
NELSON-GM: "Chernobl Cha Cha" is right! I'm beginning to understand how the more intelligent lemmings must feel as they are swept along in the mad rush to destruction.
TIGHE-NELSON: It would have been nice if Russia told everyone about the disaster so other countries could prepare for the radiation cloud. Actually, I'd say it was a requirement! Secretive societies can get very paranoid - so they won't even admit to a mistake. The Russian people seem nice enough, it's their stupid political leaders who withhold information that causes the trouble. As Americans I'm sure we can relate to that problem.
NNY-TIGHE: Ahh, but you forget, one RC is roughly equal to 1½ page of NNY or TIL. No doubt you'll be breaking #100 in aab... 4 years and 23 weeks.
RC-NNY: 100? I try not to think of such things. And true, I'm more of a warehouse 'zign than you or Keith, but I know my limitations. Would you rather receive a case of Pepsi or Coke every 4 months, or a six-pack of RC every three weeks? I rest my case.

I'm getting tired of doing (( )) whenever I insert a comment in the press. From now on I'll incase my comments in slashes //like this//, it should look a little better. Hmm... it does look better. Well, that's it then.

TOMMY

There was quite a lot of confusion about the current deadline. As I've stated elsewhere in the 'zign my nine key don't work so good //yep, yep//. The deadline was suppose to be May 29, only I didn't put in that 9. A couple of people called me about it and I told them June 2, instead, only later did I realize June 2, ain't a Thursday, so I've waited a few more days to make sure no one was left out. For you non-players following this game Jeff Zarse did call in his orders on time last issue, the one time I had RC xeroxed off on deadline day. I corrected the players copies only. Onward.

TEN NEW THINGS I'VE LEARNED FROM HIEDI,
MY GERMAN HOUSEMATE

10. American men are pushy.
9. Most Germans learn about baseball through Peanuts.
8. It's easier to sun bathe nude in Europe.
7. Americans have a loud abrasive accent.
6. Martina is not a nice middle name.
5. Saying "Germany" instead of "West Germany".
4. Bagels can sound like "beagles" and taste just as good.
3. Germans in our WWII films speak with a Bavarian accent.
2. One Hundred miles is a long distance.
1. The Duck dance!

Near as I can tell, the Duck dance is done on New Year's Eve by people of all ages. First you move your fingers and thumbs together like a duck's mouth four times, then fold your arms into a wing and flap 'em four times, then elbows into the body, head down, and twist and shake your body four times, and finish with four hand claps in front of your face. Repeat and do it a little faster. Oh yes, you should also be saying out loud, "Eh, eh, eh, eh." Which should sound something like a duck.

Everyone in the house loves it.

A BITCHIN PRIMER
by Kent Tobin

When I decided to go to school at UCSD I knew that adapting to life in Southern California would not only entail a change of climate, but also an adaptation to an entirely new regional lexicon. Annoying at first, the slang of California has become integrated into my personal vocabulary. Below are 13 of the most interesting words commonly encountered in Southern California.

- bail /verb/; encountered during orientation, my first California word means to abandon.
- biff /verb/; often confused with "buff" /see below/; means to screw up.
Example: "He really biffed that putt."
- bitchin /adj/; this term goes against the usual derogatory connotation of "bitch"; "bitchin" means "great".
- boffo /adj/; my personal favorite, this term is best spoken as one exhales sharply; it means good or great.
- buff /adj/; this refers to someone who is strong or tough; ex: "Henry Rollins is sure buff."
- dude /noun/; the quintessential form of address; it implies a benevolent quizzicalness.
- gnarly /adj/; a surfing term that refers to the texture of a wave, it has become generalized to mean great or good.
- groovy /adj/ revived from the 60's, this word is often used in a mocking sarcastic manner; out of context it also means good or great.
- lame /adj/; a derogatory term; just as a lame horse is useless, "lame" refers to people and things with the same implication.
- rad /adj/; recently the title of a horrible movie, this word derived from "radical", once again means great or good.
- shine /verb/; similar to bail; ex: "Let's shine calculus and go surf."
- stress /verb/; this former noun has been corrupted into a verb;
ex: during finals week, the phrase "Dude, don't stress." is heard often.
- stylin /adj/; this term means to do things with style, a positive thing; a skateboarder who does a trick with élan is said to be "stylin".

The use of these terms is not an occasional occurrence; they are heard often. The sociological implication of the shift of "radical" to "good" is interesting, but as a chemistry major, I am not equipped to deal with it. What I do know is that when I get back to Maine everyone will wonder why I talk so funny.

Well, thank you Kent for the article. You get a free issue and a car load of good vibes. As a Californian, none of these words are new to me, in fact, I thought everyone knew them. I did notice through your phone calls just how quickly you picked up words like "dude" and "buff."

*Judging from the above,
there must be a lot of good or great things in Southern Cal.*

Kevin
