"Expect a bigger-than-life size stab in the mail." What's Jeff Key think he is, some kind of fortune teller?

~~Erehwon~~sTab is a magazine of postal diplomacy and assorted garbage, produced between tri-weekly and tri-monthly, and edited (?) by John Koning. Subscriptions are at the rate of 10 issues for $1.00, and trades with all other Diplomacy journals are desired.

Of course, if this were Erehwon than I suppose this section of the magazine would be labeled "Erehwhinnies." Or, given the kind of forbidding notices Rod is so fond of, perhaps "Neighs" would have been appropriate. At any rate, (though I prefer 10/$1), this is merely a larger than usual (or, as Jeff Key would have it, a larger than life) issue of sTab.

Large numbers of diplomacy fans were here last weekend. But rather than go into details, I'll just wait for Walker's rendition of the event in this month's Erehwon. Besides, when I read his version I'll find out how much more fun I had than I realize now.

This issue has been somewhat delayed, and for that I'm sorry. An apology is enclosed, and I hope you won't demand a pound of flesh as well. Future issues should be more frequent. With the next issue of sTab, Valhalla will become a subzine of this complex. Val subscribers will be contacted separately about their subscriptions.

sTab is now affiliated with the Diplomacy Division of the National Fantasy Fan Federation Games Bureau. Regular Membership in the Bureau is $1.00 per year and brings with it numerous benefits, including a subscription to The Gamesletter, reduced fees in most Division 'zines (and there are quite a few of them now) and other benefits. Write to Don Miller, 12315 Judson Rd., Wheaton, Maryland 20906.

The listings have grown to enormous size, but if they are not taken care of now I am afraid sTab will collapse under their weight.

A C O N T E S T

I have in mind no appropriate gift for the winner of the contest, but there will be a prize of some sort... as fitting a one as I can devise. So, have at it:

Here is a list:

Tyrfing	Mistilteinn
Nothung	Gramm
Durendal	Hurting
Joyeaso	Glamdring
Colada	Tizona
Narsil	Auduril
Aiglos	Sacnoth
Certana	Caudimordax

- 1) What is it a list of? (Hint: neither oranges, beers, nor those apprehended in Nation City is correct.)
- 2) Which one doesn't belong on the list, and why?
- 3) Some of these can reasonably be paired... which? And how?
- 4) Associate a proper noun with each.

All entriest must be in by Friday, 25 July 1969.

My thanks to Nehran Thomson, whose contest this really is.

ANALYSIS Game III started in sTab #30, 22 April 1967, one of two such games using a line-up suggested by Derek Nelson (the other was sTab #IV - 1967St). It originally featured two players who went back to the beginnings of postal diplomacy -- Dick Schultz and Jock Root. Root, however, had to bow out before the game began, to be replaced by Roland Tzudiker.

From the first an alliance was apparent between Russia and the peripheral powers, England, Italy and Turkey. At the same time, it was apparent that Schultz, with the large number of common borders between France, Germany and Austria, had the better position. His showing in 1901 was very strong, and his position was improved when Tzudiker missed a "Fall 1901" retreat without making a compensating build, leaving Italy short one in 1902.

Schultz launched a strong attack into Italy from France, with heavy support from Austria. This soon overwhelmed Italy, isolated from its allies, and it went under in 1903. Schultz also threw France and Germany against England, successfully containing that country for several years (and, eventually, overrunning it). Turkey, however, in cooperation with Peery's Russia, made mincemeat of the Austrian front, reducing that country over a period of five years to nothing. It was seen obvious, however, that even the immediate alliance of Russia with England, Italy, and Turkey was hard put to contain the central powers. A delay of any length would have been fatal.

After making good headway against his enemies, Schultz fell into one of his periodic lapses, and in Winter 1902 John McCallum took over the central powers. McCallum was at this time playing a position identical to Tzudiker's in sTab IV, where Derck Nelson was the central powers and John Smythe was Russia. (In that game, things proceeded even better for the central powers, with Smythe and McCallum conceding to Nelson after three years.)

The extra power of the Tzudiker-Peery alliance, however, began to take its toll in 1903 as the central powers were steadily forced backward. In 1903 Peery began to take centers off of his ally as well, apparently giving him the alternative of facing an alliance of the central powers and Russia. This is, of course, the way a lone power must play it, and by the end of 1903 Peery was almost as big as one of the triumvirates. By 1905 he was as big as either, and by 1906 he was the largest power on the board.

Tzudiker, however, did not choose to cooperate with McCallum until late in the game, when he had few pieces and they were badly deployed for an attack on Russia, and even then he alternated move missing with attacks on the central powers. Even when Russia was slightly bigger than both his enemies combined it might have been possible to stop Peery... if for no other reason than that the alliance, with its much larger number of home centers, had much greater mobility since it could build almost anywhere. This, however, would have required a well coordinated plan of attack, and while McCallum was doubtlessly capable of originating such a plan Tzudiker was apparently unable to follow it.

Laurals go to Larry Peery, of course, for a victory that was both tactical and strongly diplomatic in origin... and for his press releases as well. The last one follows below (though it was not written as a "closing statement."). -- jk RALSTONSTADT (24 December 1910) The University of St. Peerigrad's Ryerson College campus was quiet tonight, Christmas eve, with most students gone home for the holidays. The lovely neo-Gothic campus had an especially lovely look about it this evening. The quietly falling white snow covered most buildings and the many lovely trees and shrubs of the campus. The only sound in the quiet night was the carillon of the bell tower playing Christmas carols. Even the administration building looked lovely as it had been decorated with wreaths of greenbeans, blueberries and orange pips.

ST. PEERIGRAD (24 December 1910) Snow was falling in the Empire's capitol as well tonight. The huge metropolis had an almost rural look about it as snow covered nearly everything. The Imperial Palace blazed in yellow, white, and amber lights in preparation for next year's celebration. The Royal Family was reportedly spending the holidays at their winter retreat at Imperial Beach.

YOUNGSTOWN (24 December 1910) Although still occupied by Russian forces Youngstown had a normal Christmas eve tonight. Russian soldiers, stationed in Hinkle Park, were singing Christmas carols to the local natives who gathered to listen. Meanwhile the Ohio State University Pussycats were practicing for their New Year's Day game with the Ohio Insistute of Technology. The game is the third and possibly last in the long series of Ohio New Year's Day Football classics, the Toilet Bowl Game.

JERUSALEM (24 December 1910) Here in the Holy City Christmas was sad as pilgrims made the trek to the former site of the birth of Christ, now removed to St. Peerigrad.

NEW YORK (24 December 1910) The world's largest city was quiet tonight as a giant snow storm covered the city with snow. Even Times Square was deserted as the huge electric sign of the Times Building read: "Peace on Earth because Peery rules it..."

THE STRANGE AND MYSTERIOUS CASE OF THE DISAPPEARING ORANGES

A SERGEANT McCALLUM ADVENTURE -- No. 17

EDMONTON (2 March 1969) Canadian Royal Mounted Police headquarters here today revealed the hijacking of the Vancouver-Toronto Express passenger-freight train of the Canadian National Railway system last evening. The daily express, The Canadian Arrow, is considered Canada's most prestigious adventure in modern communication. The high-speed express (up to 140 mph) train makes the trip from Vancouver to Toronto in less than 50 hours and provides the utmost in passenger comfort and safety. News of the hi-jacking took authorities completely by surprise and a total press blackout was imposed once the hijacking had been announced.

CROWSNEST PASS (3 March 1969) Canadian Royal Mounties revealed from their temporary headquarters near here at Coleman that the missing Canadian Arrow had last been spotted ascending the 4,450 foot Crowsnest Pass early last evening. Mountie sources refused to comment further except to say that a complete network of surveillance had been established throughout the entire area. All roads in the area have been sealed off, local railroad tracks have been placed under observation, and spotter planes have been ordered into the air to find the missing train.

VANCOUVER (3 March 1969) Canadian National Railways announced today from their offices here that 245 people had been aboard the hijacked Canadian Arrow, including the Governor-General of Canada, Sir Ian McCandlish. McCandlish's presence on the hijacked train gives authorities their first real clue to the disappearance of the train. McCandlish, long known for his opposition to the irrendentist policies of the Albertan Agrarian Party, had been the target of recent threats by extremist elements among the nationalistic Albertan population. Also among the train's passengers were: David Francis, tour director for the western division of CNG; Lord Dinwittie, British ambassador to Canada; and Sir Lionel Jeffries, Chancellor of the Dominions.

EDMONTON (3 March 1969) Canadian Royal Mountie authorities here today announced the appointment of Canada's most famous super-sleuth, retired sergeant of the Mounties, John McCallum, to head the investigation into the hijacking of the Canadian Arrow. McCallum, who holds the O.B.E. and K.C., was director of the Mountie's Special Activities Section (SAS-9) from 1952 through 1963, when he retired. Since then McCallum has handled several special cases for the Government, including the Case of the Disappearing Premier*, the bombings several years ago of Canadian mailboxes, and the kidnapping of a Vancouver telephone operator by two college students last month (the Jones-McCandlish Affair). McCallum's entrance into the case indicates the police are completely baffled by the disappearance of the Arrow, and have no clues for finding it.

RALSTON (3 March 1969) Contacted at his retirement home here, super-sleuth John McCallum today told reporters he had been following the disappearance of the Canadian Arrow closely. McCallum said, "The Arrow usually drops off my mail every week and I noted that on the morning of the 2nd my mail had not been delivered. In addition to my copies of Ebony, The Wall Street Journal, Playboy, and Graustark I had not received my monthly pension check. Naturally I was concerned and checking with the local stationmaster I discovered the train had not passed by at all. The alert followed.

"Frankly I do think the Mounties have been sniffing up the wrong tree. I don't think McCandlish was the target of the hijacking at all. There was something much more important aboard that train than McCandlish. I'm surprised authorities haven't revealed it yet."

OTTOWA (4 March 1969) Following an emergency cabinet session, Premier Pierre Lake today revealed that the hijacked Canadian Arrow had been carrying in several sealed boxcars some 100,000 crates of California oranges purchased from the United States Orange Energy Commission. The oranges were destined for the Suffield Experimental Station where experiments into the nature of orange power have been carried out for some months. Canadian physicist Dorck Nelson, developer of the pea-bomb, the mushroom gash, the cauliflower virus, had been supervising the tests. The disappearance of the oranges constitutes the gravest national emergency since the fruit represents enough destructive power to wipe out most of Canada.

WASHINGTON D.C. (4 March 1969) Junior Senator from California, Jack Greene, Jr., today rose from the floor of the Senate (where he had been sleeping since last Friday's beer-bust in the cloakroom) to attack the Administration's policy of selling oranges, even to a friendly state. Defense Secretary James Dyer lashed out at Greene from the Pentagon, calling him yellow and afraid of the real power of oranges in world affairs. Mrs. Godfrey Cambridge, widow of the former Congressman from Georgia, announced she would lead a picketing of the White House by the American League for the Establishment of a Blueberry Society. President "Tricky Nerm" McLeod, camping at Camp Runamuch, was unavailable for comment.

SKOOKUMCHUCK (5 March 1969) Royal Mounties announced here today that they had recovered hundreds of crates used to hold oranges from the hijacked Canadian Arrow. The crates were found dumped down an abandoned mine shaft near here. Significantly, the shaft was located in the wild terrain of the Hughes Range, indicating the hijackers had an intimate knowledge of the local terrain. No clues to the location of the train or its passengers have been found.

SACRAMENTO (6 March 1969) California Governor Rob Perkins, back from a fund-raising trip in Watts, announced that the California Citrus Commission's chairman, Conrad von Metzke of Cement City, had been suspended pending the outcome of the Governor's Blue-Ribbon investigating commission's report of the sale of oranges to Canada. Chairman of the commission, Dorothy Chandler, told the Los Angeles Times she was opposed to the Governor's naming of a blue-ribbon commission and declared she would insist its colors be changed to green and blue paisley.

PRIDDIS (7 March 1969) The first big break in the hijacking of the Canadian Arrow came today when Mounties announced the discovery of the train's caboose abandoned here at the Turner Oil Fields. After inspecting the caboose John McCallum's only comment was, "Very interesting, but stupid!" McCallum was seen to be rolling several orange seeds in his right hand as he left the train. Reporters noted that McCallum was showing signs of the strain of the investigation. His normally limp walk had given way to a saunter. His normally natty dress of Irish tweed had been replaced by leather jacket and mountain boots. Obviously, McCallum was super-sleuthing.

VANCOUVER (8 March 1969) Premier Pierre Lake arrived here this morning by airplane to begin an on-the-spot investigation into the disappearance of the Canadian Arrow. Lake's arrival came following his narrow victory in a vote of no-confidence in Parliament yesterday. Lake's Progressively Dependent Socialists defeated the Independent Confusion Party's bid to overturn the Government on a 154-123 vote.

WHISKY GAP (8 March 1969) Local press agents noted that John McCallum was here this morning to pick up his usually large monthly order of Canadian whisky. However, McCallum had nothing to say about rumors that he had switched from using orange mixers to lime following the Premier's banning of the sale of oranges in Canada.

PERRYVALE (9 March 1969) The missing Canadian Arrow train was found here this morning abandoned on an off-the-main-track siding of the Edmonton-Athabasca route. The train, minus its caboose, was found by Smokey Lake, noted game hunter, who was searching the area for an escaped convict from the Albertan Provincial Prison, Billie Soul Koning, who made a fortune as a wheeler-dealer in Ottawa, selling blueberry storage vat space that didn't exist to blueberry growers in Grosset Point. John McCallum, flown to the town aboard the Premier's own DH-12 Gooseybird, searched the train and then commented only to reporters, "Very interesting, but stupid!" McCallum then disappeared from view in the Gooseybird. The train revealed no clues to the location of the crew, passengers, or the missing oranges.

RALSTON (10 March 1969) Famed John McCallum has done it again! He has solved the disappearance of the Canadian Arrow. Today at his retreat here McCallum told reporters the case was solved, that the passengers would be found safe and sound in the small town of Blacberry. Reporters, Mountie authorities, and thousands of local militiamen rushed to the town -- and sure enough -- finding the missing passengers.

BIAEBERRY (10 March 1969) In an interview here Canadian Governor-General Sir Ian McCandlish revealed today that the Canadian Arrow had not been hijacked at all but had departed from its normal route at the request of the passengers who decided to make a stop in Blacberry and sample its famous fruit. As all Canadians know, the blacberry is considered the perfect fruit since it has no seeds or pits, no thorns, no peels, or anything else to detract from its simple beauty and excellent taste. Blacberries, except for their rarity, would probably be the most popular fruit in the world.

When asked what had become of the thousands of crates of oranges McCandlish told reporters, "After sampling the local fruits we decided the existence of oranges was a travesty and an offense and against the gods, so we burned what few remained. Of course, most of them were used as fuel for the train on the trip here. In fact, if you look closely you can see the orange pale floating over most of the Canadian Rockies, the results of burning thousands of oranges. However, perhaps this burning of oranges will make people realize their deadly nature and instead turn everyone to the blacberry, which is a truly lovely fruit."

Reporters also asked McCandlish how the 245 passengers and 30 crew members got along in the small town, which lacked facilities for so many visitors. "Oh, it wasn't bad. Of course, with 275 people trying to share the one public restroom it got a little crowded but as long as there were enough fruits to go around no one minded. Actually, it was a unique experience in togetherness, if you knew what I mean."

Finally, reporters asked David Francis, tour director of CNR, how he felt about the whole thing. "Well, of course the place will never be the attraction Las Vegas is, or the Gold Coast, or National City, or East 58th Street, or Times Square, but it does have possibilities. It seems a shame to let all that fruit go to waste. Maybe we can get Del Monte or Howard Hughes to open a cannery and commercialize the crop."

RALSTON (11 March 1969) Reporters today contacted John McCallum for his final observations about the Case of the Disappearing Canadian Arrow. McCallum silently pointed out a large neon sign recently constructed near his house that states: "THE TRAIN DOESN8T STOP HERE ANY MORE." Then, as he disappeared among the orange trees surrounding his house, reporters heard him say in a husky voice, "Very interesting, but stupid."

((Trust Peery to side-step me. I banish oranges from the lettercolumn, but they creep up in the press releases.))

Underlined moves do not succeed. The Italian Army Clyde is annihilated. The Austrian Army Munich retreats to Bohemia. The Russian Army Warsaw, receiving no retreat order, is destroyed.

ORKNEY AND OTHER COLD SCOTTISH PLACES The British Home Guard today arrived in Scotland to seek out and destroy the herds of Italian tourists that were tearing up the countryside in search of blueberries. After a bath in the Fifth of Ferth (fer merale) the Home Guards reported that they could not find any traces of the Italian tourists. The only clue was a large number of crushed little green blocks splattered with blueberry stains spread throughout the landscape. "Weird," stated Major Allan K. Olmes of the Home Guard.

KIEL (HEADQUARTERS OF THE GERMAN IMPERIAL STAFF) On May 7th the Imperial Army launched a major offensive along the Bavarian Sector. Elements of three armies, nearly one million men, are being committed to securing the State of Bavaria and its capital Munich. Earle reports from the sector indicate that though the enemy was not taken by surprise significant progress has been made. The Fifth Army reports that several thousand of the enemy have been taken prisoner and many more killed. In France the First Army has finally succeeded in overwhelming strong enemy resistance in Burgundy. The Italian XXXIV Corps of Infantry and the Nineteenth Cavalry Division are assumed to be destroyed. Nearly 35,000 prisoners have been taken along with over 200 guns and thousands of tons of supplies. Already preparations are being made for a major offensive against the Italian fortress of Marsailles. It is hoped by many that by the end of 1907 the last Italian will be driven out of France.

ISLE OF SAPHOS The local feminist movements, after reaching a quick and unexpected climax, have been overtaken by an unusual lethargy.

TURIN Elements of the Peoples Anti-Poory Revolutionary Army entered this city earlier today as all of Italy north of Rome is in revolt. The cause of this uprising was traced to the latest Poory decrees on marriage, returning land to the landlords, and similar reactionary programs. The only real elements supporting Poory are the landlords, the Air Force, and certain members of the Mass Medias.

MILAN This city was in grave disorder tonight upon news that Poory had asked the national enemy, Turkey, to intervene. Humbert I who has fled to Turin and now supports the Revolutionary Armies, has asked for support from the western powers.

GRODNO (12 November 1903) The Imperial Herrer Weapons Institute today closed its doors under heavy armed guard. Nobody, even representatives of the Interior Ministry, is being admitted.

BERGAMO, ITALY (13 November 1903)(Grenksnert Press) Horrified refugees pouring into this city in the foothills of the Alps report that the city of Milan is no more! At 8:00 a.m. this morning, the city was obliterated by the fall of a 500-megaton sparrow. Said His Holiness the Pope, from His refuge in Florence, "I'll bet God noticed that one."

ROUEN, FRANCE (14 November 1903)(G.P.) The inhabitants of this city on the Seine noticed today that the river was unusually polluted. On sampling the water they discovered that it was filled with debris, flotsam, jetsam, and other junk, formerly called "Paris." Later, refugees from partially destroyed Versailles confirmed the obliteration of the capital of France, crushed by a giant pomegranate, over a mile in diameter. The entire countryside for miles around is stained a bright, vivid red.

HALLE, GERMANY (15 November 1903)(G.P.) Reports reaching this city from southern Saxony indicate that Russian attacks on the German Empire are resuming. Early this morning, the city of Leipzig was wiped out by a horrible flame-breathing dragon, measuring nearly 5000 feet from snout to spiked tail, who burned and ate the entire city.

KULIKOVO (16 November 1903) His Imperial Majesty, Tsar Boris II, today announced the destruction, at dawn, of the City of Moscow. Nothing remains of the former capital of Russia but a giant oval-shaped depression, with one flat, slightly concave end, which is rapidly filling with water from the Moscow River. Said His Majesty, "It seems that God has declared war on everybody!"

HONOLULU (18 December 1903)(G.P.) The capital of Hawaii was the scene of wild celebration today as the restored Kingdom declared its independence from the United States. The climax of the festivities was the coronation of Queen Lottahuuaha. Her Majesty, lacking any brothers to marry, has wed Her uncle, Prince Makkawhuupii, Her cousins, Princes Iinee, Malinee, and Eulalius Threckmerton, and Her illegitimate half-brother, Prince Gimmiigimnee. The royal wedding was followed by a mass execution of several thousand haini plantation owners and a perfectly marvelous orgy which made the well-known similar functions conducted by the Bergia family look like New England tea-and-cookies socials. The entire Court then departed for Hilo, from whence ex-Governor Sanford Dole would be taken to Mauna Loa and thrown in. The motto of the restored Kingdom will not be as erroneously reported by certain ignorant California savages, but the ennobling phrase, designed by the Queen Herself, "In We Cost."

HONOLULU (2 January 1904)(G.P.) The Royal Hawaiian Legislature, at the request of Her Majesty, has passed the "First Cousin Law," whereby it is illegal for anyone to marry a person less closely related than his first cousin without the permission of the Crown.

HIL0 (15 January 1904)(G.P.) Harry Aca-aca, a resident of this city, has received the Royal Award for True Fidelity for marriage above and beyond the call of the law. Last week, Harry married his mother, his grandmother, three aunts, two daughters, and his brother (who used to live in National City) (or was it Chula Vista?)(Hollywood?). Her Majesty, Queen Lettahuuhae, proclaimed that she would soon embark on a world cruise to carry True Culture to the benighted inhabitants of the rest of the globe.

TARA (12 November 1903)(Eben Press) This ancient city is presently graced by the presence of Daniel, the exiled Tsar of Ukraine. He has concluded an alliance between his deeply-laid continental movement, and the High King Eeghan XXV Ua Niall. The Irish are deeply enraged by Russian designs, which involve aid to an obscure Ua Brian claimant in seizing the throne and transporting Irish subjects to slave labor in Russia. "With our combined resources," said Daniel, "we can guarantee speedy results."

NOVGOROD (17 November 1903)(E.P.) Herds of terrified refugees reported that Petrograd lay helpless before the latest Ukrainian-Irish attack. A raid by Stinker Razin easily destroyed the vaunted "GFVM," which means Great Fuss over a Vitiated Meter. Following the raid, the city was deluged with 50,000,000,000 copies of Leftovers. The crowning blow was given when Petrograd was bombarded with a 500 megatalk Peery. Government is paralyzed throughout Russia. The Ukrainians have avowed to avenge their Tsar's brother, who went to a cheesy death to save Him.

MOSCCW (20 November 1903)(E.P.) A new enemy has appeared from the east to menace the Russian empire. The herds of Veyna Emir pour over the Urals. Arkhangel'sk, Kazan', Perm, Astrakhan, Circassia, Denkeia, Georgia, Azerbaijan, Armenia, Trebizond, Persia, and all of Siberia and Turkili bow to him. He might not be so dangerous by himself, but he is backed by the Empires of China and Japan. Meanwhile, Lithuania, Livonia, Courland, Poland, and Bessarabia have burst into revolt. Unkempt prophets cry that this is the end of Russia.

GENEVA (DWE) Ah, yes... but what will Gredno do about this mess?

makes you realize how close downtown really is.

I've always known never to order "chips" in a Yank restaurant or they give you potato chips. I've even gotten used to saying "hot tea" for tea (the alternative is saying "One Kening Special on Ice, please"). But I never before realized that putting vinegar on chips is a non-Yank trait. In Florida the waitress kept insisting I take some ketchup or something else with it to kill the taste.

I was impressed by the state, or what I could see of it through the rain. The Spanish Moss growing on the dead trees in the swamps got to me too. But the palm trees were the best -- I never realized before they get all brown and shrivelled in the cold just like people do.

Gainesville. A jewel in the desert. A soggy jewel, I must admit, but a jewel. I do disagree with Ed Halle on the question of the waitress' IQ. It has to be higher than 35. I asked her for a drink and she didn't bring me milk. What more could you want?

Oranges. It is startling to realize that two such experts as von Metzke and Halle could both be wrong at the same time -- but I'm afraid it's true. There are no oranges in Florida. I looked, and all I could find was a Guatemalan canteloupe. And California does too have border guards (though I'm inclined to think they're here to keep the people in than undesirable stuff out). They year I went down the west coast they stopped and searched us. Worse, they confiscated my box of parsnip seeds. ("Quick energy -- eat them for snacks," Bob Lake once told me over a bottle of warm cake, and feel that I am I believed him.)

What's with this U.S. fascination with monarchy? I'm a loyal subject of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, but I know less about royal lineage than most of you republicans to the south. Look at Beardman. He's a bloody expert on royal families, yet he hates monarchy with a passion more understandable in a French radical of 1790 than a modern American. Still, all Beardman politics seem to be of the era around 1790 -- so maybe it fits. ((Perhaps... but whose politics in 1790? The spectra was wider then than now.))

WILLIAM LINDEN, 83-33 Austin Street, Kew Gardens, N.Y. 11415

Walker is getting out of hand and must be severely chastised.

(1) America was never a separate kingdom.

(2) If the treaty of 1783 could not affect the throne of America, then the Act of Settlement, from which the Wettin House derives its claim, could not affect the succession, both the Duke of Windsor and Queen Elizabeth II are usurpers, and the rightful King is Albert of Bavaria.

(3) In reply to Red's babbling about the Salic Law ("Salic" is a proper, not a common adjective, derived from the river Sala, as anyone who has read Henry V knows), may I point out that Edward Wettin, Duke of Windsor, derives his claim through no less than seven -- not one, but SEVEN -- generations of women, viz: Matilda, Countess of Anjou; Margaret Beaufort, Duchess of Somerset and Countess of Richmond; Margaret Tudor, Queen Consort of Scotland; Mary, Queen of Scotland; Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia; Sophia, Electress of Hanover; and Victoria, Queen of Great Britain. Snceer, sneer, and double sneer! Put that in your samovar!

(4) "Yet their own authors faithfully affirm

That the land Salique is in Germany,
Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe...
That doth it well appear the Salique law
Was not devised for the realm of France."

-- Henry V, Act I, scene 2, 11, 43-55

And if it was not devised for France, then it bloody well was not devised for North America.

Let any cast aspersions upon Shakespeare's learning, this passage is lifted from Holinshed, and any brickbats should be cast in his direction. ((The only aspersions I could wish to cast would be upon your conclusion that whatever is bad for France is also bad for North America.))

My letter in sTab 61 should have read "Apparently Conrad makes success the criterion for legitimacy, an opinion no true monarchist," etc. ((Serry))

((From a later letter))

I am puzzled by John's ((Beardman)) reference to "the most senior legitimate line of the Capet family." This implies that there can be more than one legitimate line. All the various factions of royalists would contradict this, the only question being which pretender is the legitimate king. Er, monarch -- We must not forget the Bonapartists.

Which gives me an idea. The usual practice for a country without an established royal line is to borrow a younger son from some elder royal house. In this fashion were founded most of the east European monarchies, and the houses of Norway and Belgium. Now a solution which might satisfy both traditionalists and the San Diego Royalist Party, since it lights on a native family, would be to enthroned one of the Baltimore Bonapartes. It would not be the first such proposal; Jerome IV was offered the crown of Albania.

Then again, since the U.S. holds the crown of St. Stephen, and since according to Hungarian tradition the sovereignty resides in the Holy Crown, that makes Richard Nixon King of Hungary.

ROD WALKER, 1575-A White Drive, Rantoul, Illinois 61866

Au contraire, John ((Beardman)), it is possible to have the Salic Law and the Duke of Windsor too. Most people apparently assume that selection of a monarch involves some magic time-honored unchanging ritual. In truth, the people of a nation are the only judge of legitimacy, and the principle of legitimacy is whatever the law says it is. Thus, no one can question the right of Elizabeth II to sit on the throne, because she does so in conformance with the English law. ((Which is not Salic Law.)) My contention follows the following line of argument:

a. All nations are monarchies. Republics are merely monarchies with an elective monarch, but which could choose to have an hereditary monarch. In such an instance, the nation can choose a new dynasty or select one on a "legitimist" principle. The latter is preferable if available.

b. Obviously, the only family which has any claim to the Throne of the United States are the heirs of George III. The various Stuart pretenders cannot be considered because they are not legitimate claimants under English law (which was in effect in this country until 1775/6, or perhaps as late as 1783 in some parts). This means the heirs of George V. Now, when Edward VIII (who was actually Edward XI) renounced his crown, he specifically stated which thrones he renounced. He did not renounce the throne in America, to which his family has more legitimate interest than any other. ((Family, or throne?))

c. Of course, Edward might not wish to take a new Kingship. This leaves us with two choices: Prince Albert, son of Queen Elizabeth II, or one of the brothers of Edward XI. The latter seems preferable. Prince Albert stands too close to the Throne of England, and he is at present too young, anyway.

d. Once an American monarchy is established, we, too, must establish rules of inheritance. The Salic Law seems the best solution, because placing a woman on any throne is a wholly ludicrous and unmeritorious suggestion. Actually, we should have a modified Salic Law: only a male may inherit, but inheritance may pass through the female line in the event of a lapse of direct male succession. This practice is in fact justified by practice in (e.g.) France, in which the succession did pass through the female line when direct male succession was impossible.

e. Thus, the royal succession in America should read: Elizabeth, James I, Charles I, Charles II, James II, Anne, William and Mary, George I, George II, George III, interregnum (1783-?), Edward (? -), &c. (progressing through Prince George and his descendants).

A Hawaiian Queen (short!) indeed!

JOHN W. SMYTHE, 4207 Teri Lane, Lincoln, Nebraska 68502.

On the subject as to who should, or should not, be His Royal Majesty, King of the Americas, I respectfully suggest that a sword of magnificent proportions and unparalleled beauty be manufactured and then imbedded in a block of reinforced cement. After these preparations are completed announce to the peoples of the Americas that a contest shall be held to discover the rightful claimant to the title. Announce, "When shall ever remove the sword of magnificent proportions and unparalleled beauty shall be decreed the rightful claimant. His name shall be Arthur Penthouse, defender against the smog, upholder of the purple shaft, and sundry other honors, titles, and felderel." Sixty-nine days after discovery of the claimant a crowning shall be held at Yankee Stadium, where all the beautiful peoples may come and be properly amazed by His Magnificence. And all the throng will raise their voices to the lyric tune of "Dixie," and pay homage to His Supreme Pomp. I am sure that everyone appreciates the significance of this proposal and will give it its proper support.

JOHN BOARDMAN, 592 Sixteenth Street, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11218

AN APOLOGY TO

THE READERS OF STAB,

VALHALLA AND RAGNAROK

It has been several months since any DWE publications have seen print, and I am ashamed. After four years of regular publishing, with no delays of more than a week (and few of them), I have lapsed for months, without telling more than a few people that I could not publish. Mail has lain unanswered -- nay, unopened -- for months, and I have missed moves in games for the first time since 1964-5. It is very depressing.

There is a feeling, somehow, that to a Gamesmaster Diplomacy should be "number one." This is ridiculous. Even if it were possible, such an ordering would be a gross distortion of any sane system of values. A Gamesmaster does, however, owe something more to his readers and players than unexplained silence. I am sorry.

I have never before been in a position where I felt I could not devote 16 hours (average publishing time for sTab or Valhalla) to Diplomacy. But this spring I held down two (really, three) teaching jobs. Now, I take pride in my abilities as a Gamesmaster, and I think I do a reasonable job. I also take pride in my abilities as a teacher, and when I sell my services I take my responsibilities very seriously indeed. The requirements of my teaching positions were such that I did not feel free to devote time to Diplomacy. I was, in fact, rarely in Youngstown, even on weekends, and when I was there was work awaiting me that could not be postponed. All this does not excuse my lapses, but it is the rationale behind them. Diplomacy, important though it is to me, just doesn't rate as high as some things. And I don't think it should.

Frankly, publishing two tri-weekly and one bi-weekly magazine is an impossible schedule (for me). I will be folding Valhalla after #15, and combining it into sTab. See the pertinent publications for full details.

I hope, in the future, not to have this sort of trouble again... or at least to make provision for it if I do. At any rate, judging by past performance, you should all feel safe until about 1973, when the next breakdown is due.

Thank you for your patience. I hope you feel it worthwhile.

Best,

John Koning
