

Saint George

AND THE

A Vast Wasteland Publication

Diplomacy is lying to Turkey three times in one game and being surprised when Russia lies to you.

I want to thank all you brave souls for trying the great experiment. World War III starts in this issue. I wish to again caution all of you that moves and press are to be sent to Dave Bunke ONLY. I will not be responsible if one of you is listed as NMR by Dave and you claim you sent your orders to me. I wouldn't deliberately lose your orders, but I don't want to be put under suspicion.

Next thanks to those who volunteered to standby. The only one I didn't need this issue was one who wanted to wait until his present game ends before standing-by. So if there are any more volunteers, let me know. I use a standbys name only until he is actually put into a game, then he is dropped from the list. So if any of you who have done standby duty before, want to do it again, let me know. Standbys, the hobby being the way it is, are always needed.

Phoenix ends this issue, closing statements will be in next issue. No regular openings until another game ends.

However, I still have openings in Holocaust. This game will be reviewed in an upcoming issue of Diplomacy World, by Konrad Baumeister. If you want to get a little familiarity with the game, now's your chance. Steve's openings in his own zine have closed. This is an opportunity to play the game with the designer. Maps-large enough for FTF play- are available from: Steve McLendon, Box 57066, Webster, TX 77598 for $1.50. If you have obtained your map, write me and tell me you want to play. I only require a sub. Steve, Fred Hyatt, Glenn Ledger and Chuck Price are signed. It's a 9 player game.

SAINT GEORGE SPEAKS

Ratings

I have been letting Steve do the publishing of information about our new ratings since he was the originator of the idea of reviving ratings, has been spending the bulk of the time done in organizing it, and is much much better at organizing than I am. But in so doing I have been making Steve the butt of the criticism, which is not fair, since all the major decisions about what should and should not be done has been reached through compromise, since I'm afraid Steve and I don't agree on quite every issue.

However some things have come up which I feel I want to comment on. First is Mark Berch's criticism on the way we are handling voted wins in which the winner has less than 15 centers. My feeling at first was to go with the tradition and regard these as a draw. Steve pointed out that the players definitely did not want a draw, or they could have held out for one. He suggested we do as we are doing, giving the winner his points for winning but denying points to the rest of the players. Which is surely better than my suggestion not to rate the games at all. Steve's feeling, and mine, is that if players cannot stop a win, they can get points for surviving. But if they do not even try, they deserve nothing. And it is our contention that the players did not try sufficiently if they grant a win to 14 centers or less. Mark wants to argue that there is nothing mystical about 15 that makes a win unstoppable as opposed to 14. Quite right, but we had to draw the line somewhere and that's where. Any real discussion about 14, 15, 13, or 16 is hair-splitting.

The other matter which is going to draw the most criticism, I feel, is our decision not to rate standbys at all. Some people feel that standbys should not be penalized in any way for what they do with a position, but they should be rewarded for draws and wins. Others feel that we did not provide enough penalties to evaluate what a standby does. My feeling, and Steve's, is that the performance of a standby cannot be related to the performance of the original player. The latter has no handicaps except his particular country and his past relationships, if any, with the other players. A standby takes over a given position in a game, has some of the legacy of the preceding player in this game, in addition to his own relations with the other players. I am sure there is a system which can accomodate standbys, but it would be so cumbersome as to occupy all the raters'time. I don't plan on making ratings my life's work. But I can't in good conscience pretend there is no difference in taking over a 5 center England in 1902 and taking over one in 1908, nor in taking over a four center Russia as opposed to a four center Turkey. To truly evaluate a standby's performance, you need to know everything about the game, and that isn't possible.

To clear up one or two minor points Mark raised. A winner gets 34 pts. plus the number of centers he has UP TO A MAXIMUM OF 52 pts. Centers over 18 are disregarded. And a country is considered eliminated when the player of record drops, no matter how many centers he has when he drops. This is because we are rating the performance of the players, not of countries. If a player drops when he is stabbed, rather than trying to hold on, he is penalized. We hope this will reduce the number of drops.

Here we go.....World War III

 MAP Corrections *****

- Canada Starts with Fleet Montreal(nc).
- Map#2 A line should be drawn from the line demarcating the Arabian Sea straight downward dividing the Indian Ocean into two halves; The East Indian Ocean and the West Indian Ocean. The Arabian Sea touches both. The Indian province of Madras touches only the East Indian Ocean.
- Map#3. Montreál is a double-coasted province with a NC & EC. The Gulf of Panama has been omitted; refer to Map#5 for its location and draw it on map #3. Panama should still touch the South Pacific Ocean
- Map#4. The Indian Ocean should say West Indian Ocean
- Map#6. The Indian Ocean should say East Indian Ocean.
- Map#7. Draw a line from the Arabian sea border straight downward dividing the Indian Ocean into two halves, West Indian Ocean and East Indian Ocean.
- Map#8. The Indian Ocean should say West Indian Ocean

Map Notes

Yes# both Thailand(wc) and Malaysia touch the East Indian Ocean. Chungking does touch Outer Mongolia.

If you have any other map questions either Dave or I will be happy to answer them. If you do not have maps let me know! (More on page 4)

Victory Criteria: A single victory is obtained if one country controls 34 centers. If two or more countries reach 34 the war will continue until one has one more center than the other and still has 34. A joint victory is achieved if 3, 4 or 5 countries agree upon a joint victory and they control 68 centers between them and each of them has at least one more center than any country excluded from the joint victory, or all players still in the game may agree to end the game in a draw shared by all players still in the game.

First season will be Spring, 1980. Over to you, Dave....

And a last press release:

Mossy Cowbell-: Our wise general in Ukraine, Marshall Chippylov, has trained his army in the science of metempsychology, and they are all turned into crows and hawks and headed for Germany and France, whose crops and chickens will mysteriously be decimated this year.

Looking for a Youngstown game ? Steve McLendon has openings in the Dragon and the Lamb. write Steve at Box 57066, Webster, TX 77598.

Lee Kendter is maintaining permanent openings in a sub-zine. I think it's going to be run as a warehouse zine, so if the game is the important thing with you, and you want one run by a reliable GM-and we all know how hard they are to find nowadays- write Lee at 4347 Benner St. Philadelphia, PA 19135.

via Turkey: To Paris and Berlin. It looks like England will get the lion's share of Russia. Who will be next on the menu? If this keeps up, one of you will end up victim and the other, puppet. France: What fools the German people and leaders are. They are already under attack by Russia and Italy, yet they attack France ! France will die, but he certainly will make sure that the foolish German goes down with him.

If what Mark Berch says in Diplomacy Digest(available from Mark at 492 Naylor Place, Alexandria, VA 22304) about Conrad von Metzke's handling of the Diplomacy World transfer is true, and it probably is, then my opinion of von Metzke has hit rock bottom. If you see that he is starting up a game zine AGAIN, stay away from it unless you want to be orphaned. This guy is just not reliable.
