

THE TACTFUL ASSASSIN

THE FRONT PAGE

This is a new experience for me. I hope that everything turns out all right. This new program does things a little differently than the others I have been using. They were word processing programs that I used to turn out a newsletter which looked moderately like a newspaper or magazine. This one, Aldus Pagemaker, is meant to make up print ready material. Getting used to it is significantly different, I suppose because it is more powerful than the other programs. It seems to do things in different ways than most of the more pure word processors. We'll see how things go when the product is ready.

Well folks it seems that we're having a few teething problems. I know that this program is supposed to be able to move graphics that contain text together (they're stored in different places). I've even seen it done. But I can't seem to make it select all the stuff I want to move. So right now there is one game report on each page with a vast amount of blank paper around it. Undaunted, I will plunge forth and put The Tip of the Icicle across a whole bunch of pages. I'll iron it out by next time. The learning curve just wasn't quite steep enough. At least it will give me lots of room for more Far Side cartoons. I also don't seem to be able to get my regular footer in gear. One must have some room for growth, but this could be ridiculous.

All of this stress coming on the heels of a Forth Niner fan's worst nightmare, too. I could see it coming, and I do have to admit that this year the Cowboys were the best [read: most consistent] team. I don't even mind that Charles Haley is the only guy with five rings [two as a Niner, remember]. The thing that really bugs me is that Dallas didn't really win the Big Game, Pittsburgh lost it. Who is that bozo they have as a quarterback? The rest of the team played at a championship level. They started slowly but then put things together and really held the Cowboys to no points in the second half. Jerko choked big time, twice, and handed the Dallas guys two freebies. If the goon had any poise and had thrown the ball out of bounds those two times the outcome would have been 21-17 Pitt. Of course the Cowboys might have played differently if they had lost the lead, and may still have manufactured their own TD drive. Take the one Joker out of the Pittsburgh lineup and they were the better team. One must assume they didn't have anybody better, so you have to count him. Too bad, so sad. I think his days in Steel Town are numbered, just like Lee Norwood's were in Buffalo. No one works that hard to get there, to have one guy throw it all away for them. He will be gone. If he is still around then the Steelers can forget about any more Rings. They'll never see another one. I was at the gym on Monday and one guy was saying that he hasn't gotten any stronger after two months of steady work outs. He thought he'd take a couple weeks off, but then thought "There's no football to watch, why take two weeks off?" 'til Fall...

LETTER BOMBS

Ray Grib: So we have another passenger on the weenie-wagon. Well of course there are more cars on the road than bikes. Percentages is not the focal point here because safty-Nazis are always whining about "helmetless bikers lying in comas while taxpayers pay their bills." The simple fact that more motorists suffer head injuries than bikers exposes the hypocrisy of the safety-crats claiming they are concerned about lives. If so, why target bikers? You can save MORE lives by sticking helmets on car occupants.

A motorcycle helmet serves one purpose: It leaves a pretty face for the undertaker to work with. At high speed the biker's body becomes a projectile. Without a helmet, the head smashes on impact. With a helmet and it's extra weight, the neck snaps like a twig on impact. You die either way. Helmets help in some low speed mishaps. But overall, I prefer the slight advantage of unblocked hearing and complete vision to better AVOID an accident. In a few months, why don't you boys come to Florida? I'll take you for a ride in 95+ degree heat and humidity with a full face helmet on your head through some heavy stop and go traffic. Maybe then you'll understand.

Everything in life requires some risk. Trouble is nobody wants to be held responsible for their actions. "Call a lawyer, blame and then sue someone else." Slimy politicians taking freedoms away is not the answer.

ECF: Right on for the part about being responsible for your actions. The USA has gone way outta line on the "I deserve to be protected from everything all the time!" gig. You're bang on that the best policy is ALWAYS to AVOID the accident in the first place. People in cars forget that fact far too readily. As I've said before: I don't care if anyone doesn't wear a helmet, just don't expect me to pay if you don't die.

NINJISTICS

Last Month's questions:

Wordplay: Darn, I actually read these answers before I put the thing in. Now I can't find them. I'll look some more.

Truth Day: It was Tuesday. Reverse Anagram: Ultrasonic

Aliens Five husband/wife teams arrived for the intergalactic meeting on Earth. For ease of recognition the males had M odd numbers and the females F even numbers. Each pair had different distinguishing features and a subject for discussion. They arrived in different types of space vehicles and they docked in a set of five bays. The pairs sat in a set of five double seats in the auditorium.

M1 was preparing his speech on time travel and had arrived in a warp distorter.

The mind-reading couple, who had 4 arms each, had parked their nebula accelerator between the space oscillator and the astro carrier.

F6 in the seat next to the end said to her neighbour, "My husband M3 and I have noticed that you have 3 legs."

F4 admired the galaxy freighter owned by the pair who each had 3 eyes.

F8's husband turned his papers on astral teleporting with 12 fingers.

M5 in the middle seat said to F10 in the next seat, "The pair with webbed feet on your other side have an astro carrier."

M7 and F2 were studying their papers on anti-gravity.

Who was the wife of M9, and who was the male speaker on nuclear fission?

Robert Lescot think B.C. would receive more [positive] attention if you stopped electing such complete fools to the Premier's office. Read up a bit - the trend goes back to earlier than the turn of the century. A similar thing happened in Ontario under the former boy-premier.

ECY This sounds an awful lot like, "Grow up and elect some good right-wing politicians, then we'll treat you like real people." I am quite aware of the history in B.C. Yes, we have had many 'colourful' politicians. I don't need to remind up that some of the Wackiest of them were good Old Boys way out on the right end of the spectrum. I'm not sure I see your point. Do you think I should really take Mike Harris seriously. A majority of your province doesn't think so right now and you just elected him!!!

Wayne Ball If I can insert my two cents worth concerning your diatribe. Growing up as a Californian, I assumed most of North America was fairly homogeneous. {ECY: So did I} Then about twenty years ago, I went on tour with a Drum and Bugle Corps. We did a couple of shows in Alberta, where the only difference we saw was that the locals used strange colored two-dollar bills, and said "Eh" a lot.

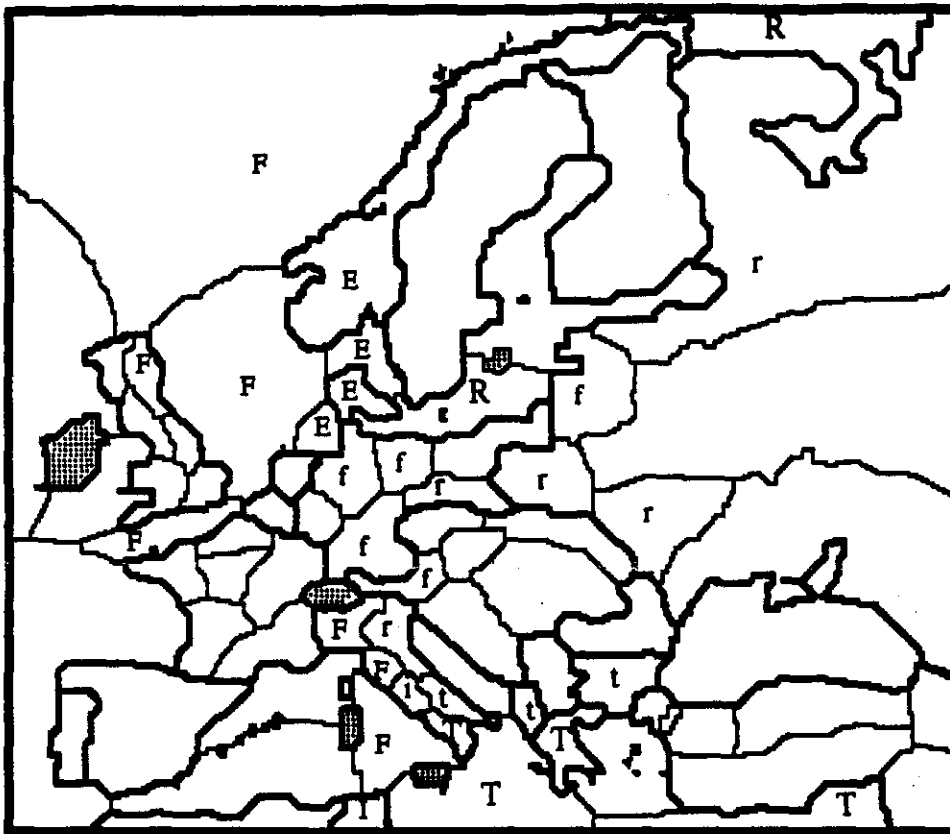

The, after traveling through the Great Lakes Region (Ohio, New York, etc.) we stayed (at St Laurent College) a week for the International Championships in Montreal. What an eye opener! I can still not believe how "French" French Canada is! Even then, the political talk centered upon separatism. The "Language Laws" were becoming strictly enforced. This meant that no sign could be displayed in any language other than Franch. McDonalds was advertising "hambargoise". I kept thinking: Now there's a way to keep the French language strong and proud! Hambergoise?

Anyway, the talk on CBC was whether it would not make more sense to admit that the country had no unitary identity, and that "E Pluibus Unim" just wasn't working. I must say that I agree.

British Columbia has much more in common with Washington and Oregon than it does with Ottawa and PEI. Some of the Canadian Provinces would fit right in as US states (the old US Articles of Confederacy, replaced by the US Constitution 210 years ago, had a special provision for the easy admission of Canadian territory into statehood.) Other Provinces, eg. Quebec, could easily become unimportant first world countries, on the model of New Zealand or Belgium. Still others, with their mineral wealth (alberta perhaps) could go either way.

I'm an outsider looking in. But it appears that the non-Quebec provinces have got to decide what is in their best interests. I'm not sure that the true patriot's pride is enough to hinge a country on.

ECY It's called TROC (the rest of Canada). In true the whole of North America has more ties North-South than it does East-West. There is a good book: The Nine Nation of North America. Ecotopia goes from Alaska to San Francisco. I do feel at home virtually anywhere in that region. Many now feel that TROC would be better off without Quebec.

Press: Czar-Arm: Glad to have you on board, although I wish you'd kept that army or I had stayed put in GoB. My tactical decisions thus far have been less like Patton and more like Charlie Chaplin. I will continue to try to evacuate Scan or, if necessary, disband the army. Suggest you get F Swe into Skag if you haven't already.

Czar-Spam: I'm looking forward to visiting some Parisien brothels in the near future.

Czar-WD: Since Spiff isn't cooperating I guess we're forced to take this course. Assuming I'm still in Ven, I'll build an army. Either way you need to take Tri now and help me plug the hole in the middle. I can disband A Fin with no consequences now that England and I are cooperating and you can then funnel armies to the front where they can help.

Czar-Spiff: The Frog is using you as a shield. How long will you continue to take bullets for this so-called ally who has sealed your fate with his stab of England? If he'd used his fleets to help you instead you wouldn't be in this pickle. Turn now and revenge shall be yours.

Spiff-Czar: Screwing with Weed!! Ne's the one in my homeland, of course I'll be "screwing" with Weed.

Spiff-Spam: I agree with getting my homeland back, however, I don't think we will do that by attacking through the Med. We are essentially stalemated in that theatre. Our best bet is a strong overland attack through Austria.

WD-Czar: I have an idea. Don't freak out ...I'm not attacking you, but I think

This may help... Just be forewarned.

WD-Czar: If you supported me to Rome, I hope you supported the fleet I need to get boats bordering the Tyrrhenian.

WD-Arm: Have you come to your senses? I certainly hope so. Good luck reclaiming your island...and whatever else you take from France.

Spam-Arm: Trust you to turn a cake walk into a real fight. Darn...

Spam-Spiff: Stick with me, Okay? You're my only friend now, and if you turn against me, I'm history.

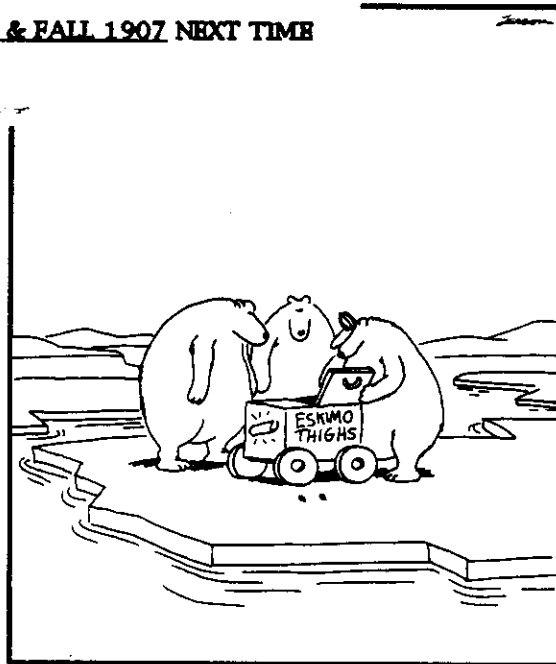

Arm-Czar: If your F StP moved to Bar, back my F Nwy-Nrg in Sp '10. Move your A Fin to back up Liv/War. Your F Bal can help you out in N. Germany. Ideas are welcome.

I had intended to put some writing in these right hand columns. It's late, I'm tired. I will leave it for next month to polish up the edges of this rag. I've expanded my mind enough for this week.

Press: Iti-Rus: Okat, Okay. You told me so, right?

Iti-Ger: I don't know what to tell ya.

Rus-Ger: We seek your agreement to demilitarize our common border. We have restricted Our forces from entering the provinces of Prussia and Silesia. Our emissary seeks your personal assurances that German arms will be similarly restrained. We regret that Our conflict with the Hapsburgs will draw Our forces into central Europe. Any perceived threat to Germany caused by Our army's mere presence is regrettable, and will quickly be remedied. We place a high value upon maintaining the Kaiser's good will.

Rus-Eng: To Our Windsor cousin, Greetings. We are extremely concerned about the presence of naval forces in the Norwegian Sea, in spite of Our polite warning that such action could be considered an act of war against the House of Romanov. In response, We have been forced to mobilize an army here in Our winter quarters in St Peter's Burg. We will maneuver this army to defend Our northern provinces and to support Our rightful sphere of influence in Scandanavia. We would rather have used Our resources to more effectively confront the Austrians, yet Your Majesty must be made aware of Our commitment to defend the Russian Empire. Note also that We have refrained from fielding a navy, the better to protect Our homeland while not threatening yours. I pray you, reconsider your deployments. It is folly to venture far afield in search of unnecessary fight. Your rightful occupation of Norway is best secured by our continued friendly relations. Confrontation serves us ill.

Rus-Fra: Apparently the Third Republic has renewed the French claim to Alsace-Lorraine.

Rus-Tur: We present you with the Province of Greece as a might gift to the Sultan. Xerxes has been avenged.

Rus-Aus: Our good friend Theodore Roosevelt, President of the Americans, once explained to Us a marvelous military maneuver developed in the American west. We offer it as a suggestion. It is entitled: "circle the wagons".

Rus-Iti: We have granted asylum to the Pope on the condition that he remain cloistered and free of politics. He is currently tutoring the Czarina in Latin. With his help she has been able to translate "Veni, Vidi, Voci" (I came to the shopping center, I saw all the bargains, I told all my friends about them.)

Tur-Aus: The Ottoman Empire does not recognise the illegitimate Austrian claims to territory in the Balkans. The Empire shall reclaim its rightful place as the sole hegemony over Serbia and Greece.

Tur-Fra: Gobble. Gobble!

Tur-Iti: While We have never had a particular fondness for the Leader of the Barbarous Christians of the West, We find your treatment of your spiritual leader to be reprehensible. In deed, We find your overall attitude toward religion in general to be despicable and highly uncivilised. It causes Us offense.

Tur-Pope: In spite of the irreverence shown by Your forlorn compatriots, We are prepared to offer you a place of honour in the Ottoman Court as "Special Advisor-in-Exile on Western Religion", provided that you renounce Your false prophet and embrace the truth that is Allah.

ECY: You guys should sort out who is going to take this guy.

Fra-Ger: How ambitious you are!

Fra-Eng: Whoops! I prefer German beer but thanks anyway.

Fra-Iti: I hear your prefer Ger bratwurst.

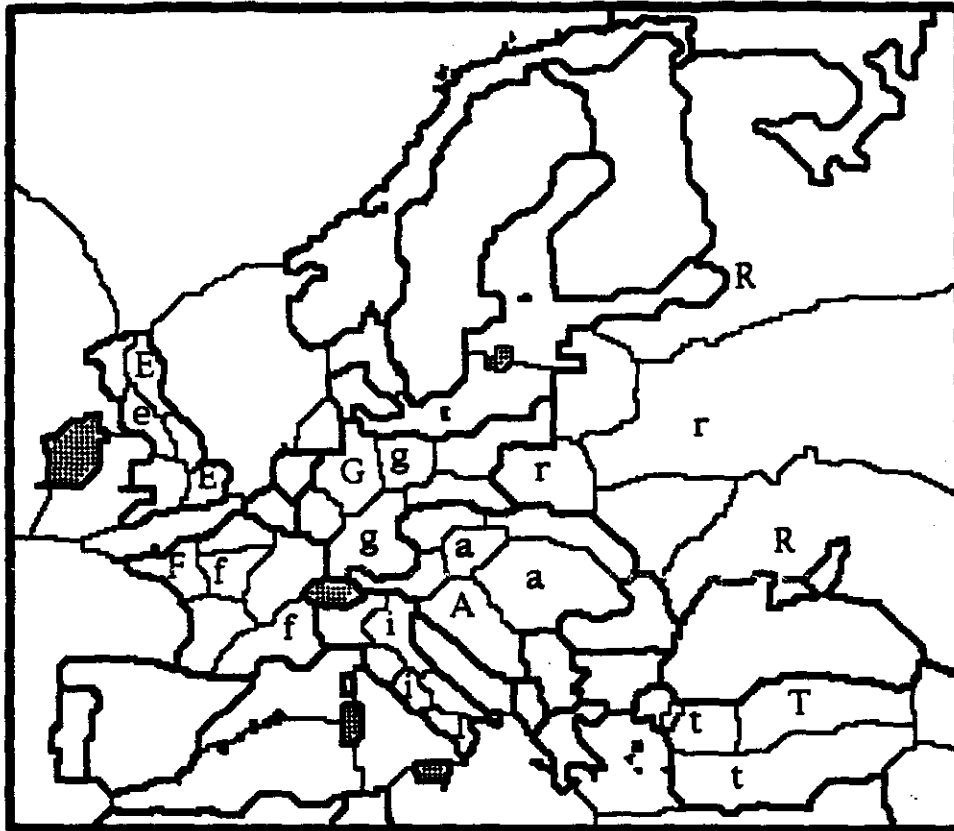

Fra-Aus: Wow! Talk about grace under pressure.

Fra-Rus: Ball; Interesting! Is that a noun or a verb?

Fra-Tur: Hiya, Major. What's up?

Final Note: My darn disk crashed!!! I took it to school to finish off some tiny things and print it. I died, but I didn't know it, I thought it was the laser printer fonts. Then when I got home it sucked down the virtually complete copy from my hard drive. I had to totally rebuild pages 6 & 7 and mostly rebuild 4 & 5 and spruce up page 8. I'm not a happy camper. So when this should have gotten into the mail Friday, it won't until Saturday which means that it won't really move until Monday. Sorry. Now I'm really angry, but I still have a s-t eating grin on my face.

This is the best fit I have ever seen for preferences. Five of you got your first choices and the other two got their third choice. I usually feel good if a bunch get their fourth choice.

The rules for prophetic retreats, removals and builds are these: If you think you might have to retreat some unit specify your ordered preference of spaces it can go to. If you do not state a preference then I will retreat the unit to the first space to the right of the attacking unit. If it is unavailable then I look to the first to the left; second to the right, second to the left, etc.. If there is only one place it could go then that's where it'll go even if you say nothing.

With you Fall orders you should get in the habit of telling me which unit you would like to lose, if you have to, and the three builds you would like, in preference order. That way, even if you don't have to do anything, you're covered just in case the unexpected happens. All it costs is a bit of ink on the page. If you don't tell me which one(s) you'll miss least then I will make removals starting with the furthest from home NOT on a supply center. If you forget to tell me your build wishes, tough, you'll play short for the following year.

This will be the format for all years after 1901: Spring & {Summer}; Fall & Autumn [retreats] & Winter [Builds/Removals]. In 1901 I like to have a separate Winter season. This is the time when diplomacy is needed to cement alliances. So even though you're not suppose to talk before builds, I do it.

WE WILL PLAY SPRING 1901 NEXT TIME
