Volume 3, Issue 28

July 6, 1984

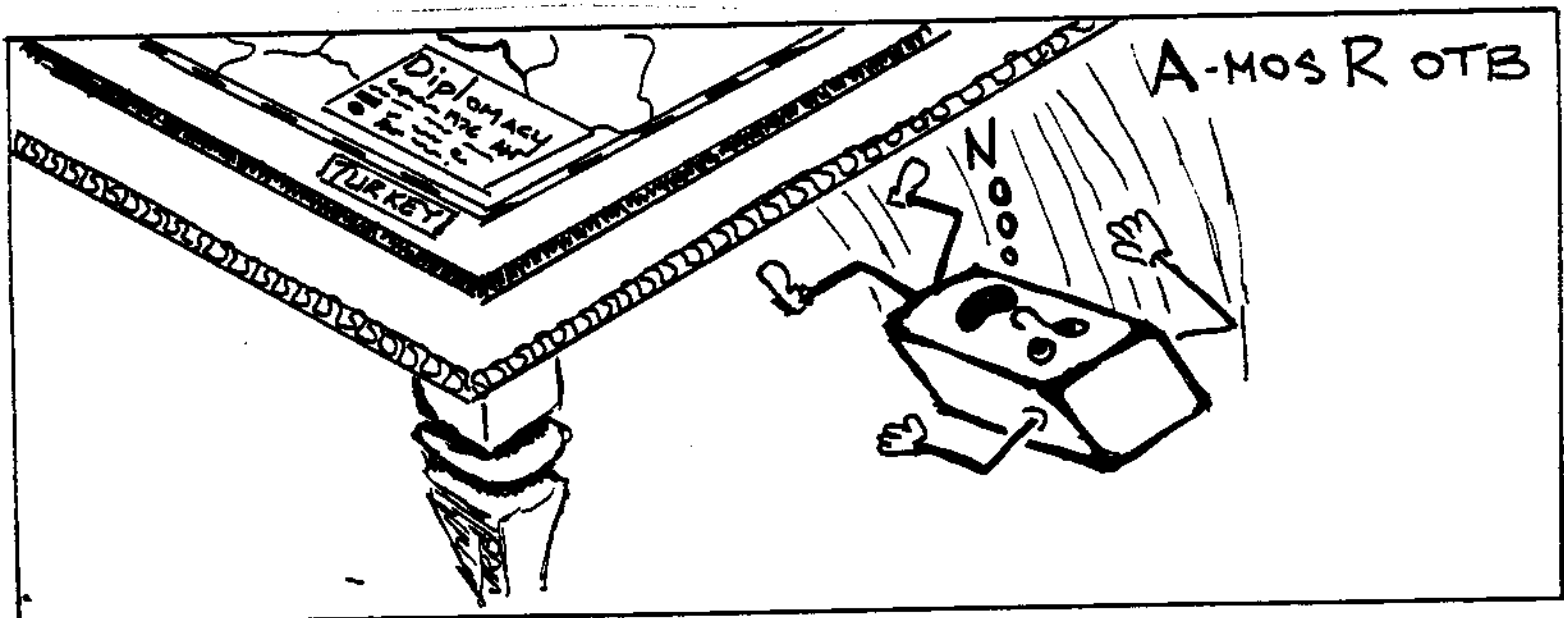

The Diplomat is the home of 83U,83AK,83AL,83C6,83C7,83HY,82HL,83IF,84AP,84AQ.

Deadline for all games in this issue is 10:00 pm EST on July 27, 1984.

David Baker

1. Please note COA for Alvin Kusumoto. Also note address corrections for Len Kay and Bob Sweeney.
2. Last issue I suggested Conrad von Metzke's Costaguana for game openings. I have been informed by one of my subscribers that when Conrad folded this 'zine many years ago, many games were orphaned and subscription fees were not refunded. Since I am not familiar with the situation, I can only pass this information along to any of you that may be considering one of Conrad's games.
3. DIPCON '84 was quite fun. A review can be found elsewhere this issue. I met many of The Diplomat's subscribers for the first time: David Frick, David Baker, J.R. Baker, Matt Fleming. And I saw again Mark Luedi, Jeff Hines, Ben Schilling and many other postal friends (and enemies!).
4. A few have asked about The Diplomat's schedule. Basically, deadline is Friday. Much of the 'zine is already typed at this time. The latest the 'zine will be mailed is Monday morning - it typically goes out on Sunday. And once, yes, it was in the mail Saturday. If you have not received your copy by Thursday or Friday, there is probably a postal problem. Game results are available usually Saturday evening, and definitely by Sunday evening.
5. Steve Knight has sent me some information about the International Subscription Exchange. The ISE is designed to make easier for trans-Atlantic Dipzine subscriptions by providing a central clearing house for these subscriptions. If you have interest in a subscription to one of the European 'zines, drop Steve a note. His address is in the player list.

GAME NOTES: Preliminary Spring 1990 orders are due next issue. Spring 1990 orders are due issue 2.30. Players should find a larger map (and hopefully clearer) enclosed. Use of abbreviations is discouraged. This will be the last set of "Game Notes" for this game from me (Dave). Scott Mercer is your GM, so send your orders to him. If you wish to save postage, Scott has graciously agreed to receive orders for other games and he'll forward them to me. But don't send any WWIIb orders to me. Also, several proposals were submitted suggesting changes to the rules and/or map. Since this variant has been tested numerous times by the author, the proposals are not listed. If, by the first deadline, anyone would like to propose a change, then at that time the proposals will be listed to be voted upon. The Diplomat's normal house rules will be used where appropriate. Please note that press will be limited to a few lines/season/player.

DIPCON XVII

Pete Gaughan and Mike Connor are to be thanked for doing a wonderful job running the Dip tourney this year. It was very organized and much appreciated. Ben Schilling also deserves a big thank you for running the Gunboat tourney. I am happy to brag again this year about my own finish. I played 2 games and kept my alliance from Spring 1901 until the finish. Jack Brawner(France) and I(Germany) played a two-way in round 2. Each of us had a minor ally, Russia(Mark Frueh) and Italy(Chris Pearce) that worked with us against the A/T that survived the draw. In round one, I organized a western-triple (EFG) as England with Doug Ingram(Germany) and Robert Eskridge(France). We played the triple all the way ending with 11 centers apiece and a 1 center Turkey surviving. Dipcon was a great time for me. I rode with Mark Luedi, Matt Fleming, Mark Frueh and Nancy Irwin. We stayed at Jeff Hines' in Dallas. James Woodson stayed with us, too. I met David Frick, J.R. and David Baker at Dipcon. In fact, J.R. took over the France in my round one game and continued the EFG triple to the end. Of course, other subbers Luedi, Fleming and Schilling were there, along with many other dippers that I have know postally. The first 4 finishers in the tourney had the only 4 tourney wins this year, with Jeff Key winning. The latest Europa Express has Honest Al Pearson claiming the best finish for a postal player was some "deadwood" from Indiana by the name of Kleiman. That goes to show you that the best Diplomacy players are not a part of the postal hobby yet, and that the placing of DIPCON in cities like Dallas or Seattle can do nothing but allow the postal hobby to grow. Contrary to wishes of many postal players and publishers, next year's DIPCON will be held in Seattle in conjunction with the Dragonflight gaming convention. Also, the many proposals that attempted to modify the existing DIPCON system were defeated - which is good, because it is obvious that the existing system works. There were new faces at DIPCON and an outstanding turnout in general. These things can only allow the postal hobby to grow.

Now, "DIPCON 84 - The Worst Dip Ever" (name withheld by request):

Let me tell you about Dipcon 84.

Day 1 Thursday - After driving around Dallas for an hour of two, we finally found Market Hall (not on our $.75 map). You could tell it was the right place by the long line of people. Lond is when the people in the middle don't know where the end is

(and that was for all of us who had pre-registered). After giving up on registering any time soon and deciding to get a "cool one" from the truck, I managed to trip over a guy wire and destroy my shin - Pain, pain...Bad words, etc. Well, I hobbled to the truck, dropped the keys on the console and tried to figure out what to do for 2 hours. Finally, after the pain had subsided and the heat was getting unbearable, the long line (in air conditioning) didn't seem so bad! Right after I slammed the door shut I remember - THE KEYS! Did you know that you can break into a truck in broad day light in a parking lot in the middle of Dallas and NOONE will even stop to ask what's going on? Well, I finally got registered and learned that the 7 p.m. games were moved back to 9 p.m. - and that was only day 1.

Day 2 Friday - Arrived at Market Hall at noon for a quick look/see before the 1 p.m. Gunboat tourney. I met the Indy delegation and got a copy of The Diplomat and saw what you all did to me. In round 1, I played France to a 9 center/England 8/Turkey 8 and advanced to the top table. In round 2, I drew France again (and missed the 2 pm Risk tourney) but was pounced upon by England and Italy in S'01. But I fought back to a 6-center and growing by shutoff time (2 hours). I think I like that game - you can't put your foot in your mouth (or beg formally).

At 6 pm, the Civilization (6 hours) started. It had been so long I'd forgotten half the rules but you can't get wiped out, so I learned from mistakes and grew and grew and grew. Then like Cinderella, I went from first to last place on the last year. They destroyed the leader and all my cities!

Day 3 Saturday - Table 5 and drew Austria (Holy Smoke) in the Dip Tourney and against my better judgement, but with a hope for a spectacular showing I made a suicide pact with Italy (Mark Frueh). In fall 1901, I got Fricked again (see John Paul Jones) and was out in 1903. I finally managed to see the sights at Market Hall. Manufacturers and game merchants displays...Made the dip meeting and voted (Seattle in '85) and got to standby for a 2-center Germany after the meeting. Well, at least I survived and voted for the 4-way EFIA at 2:15 am in Spring 1911.

Day 4 Sunday - Table 1 and all the losers. High man had 1 point. Guess who drew Austria again. Of all the countries, I think Austria is my 8th favorite. Fortunately the rules prevented me from playing the Red again, and I got Russia. Now I wouldn't say I was desperate, but I tried the shuffle with Mark Luedi (Turkey) and...you guessed it? Stabbed again - out in 1905.

It really wasn't until halfway through the drive home that what had happened really began to get to me. 13 tables - 91 dips. Of all the people at DIPCON 84, I was the only one to leave without a point - I am the WORST Dip for 1984! OK Dave, sign me up as a standby - I need more practice - Seattle here I come! I will be either the most improved or the worst dip ever!!!

Now look fans, this poor dipper has the only win in The Diplomat. And he's the worst Dip player? Do you know what that makes the rest of you?

Press Column

Bismarck

(Lord Lycanthropy-GM) I know this game is boring, but even His Lordship is going to stay up to the end.

John Paul Jones

James Kirk

(England-Moscow) Thanks for the good words. They are all true of course.

(London-Board) Yeah, though I ride through the valley of Death, I shall fear no evil, for Nelson is with me! (I'd rather have the FORCE, but what the heck?) Guns on the left, Guns on the right, but onward I go, for I'm the meanest SOB on the board! Top that, NH.

Talleyrand

(Austria/Hungary-Mr. Phil) You can beat some of the players all of the time and you can beat all of the players some of the time--but can you beat all of us at the same time?

(London) All of Europe awaits news of the fate of M. Pakel, the plucky Frenchman. Rumors abound that agents of Lord Redmond have assassinated the President of France and replaced him with a friendlier government. When questioned by reporters, Mr. Phil replied, "Who, me? Would I do that to my blood brother?"

doubt due to the Budapest mistake. The Italian presence had also added an uncertain element, but a presence which might be turned to the advantage.

The situation with Germany was a different matter, however. Following the attempted attack on France seven months ago, the Imperial General Staff had logically assumed that there would be war along the Rhine. Plans for the latter half of 1901 had relied heavily on that mistaken assumption. But somehow, a Paris-Berlin tie had been forged and Germany had listened to Austria-Hungary's plea for help. The link of blood between the Kaiser and the Tsar's wife, the Empress Alexandra, was ignored (not surprisingly, though, since Alexandra loathed her cousin), and ships had clashed near Stockholm. Neither side could claim a victory, but the Germans had decidedly gained the upper hand.

Rostov looked upwards, his eyes scanning past the spire of the Fortress of Peter and Paul, as he tried to think of a way for Russia to regain the destiny which was her right. At the same time, he realized, his reputation was at stake, since the Tsar relied heavily on his advice. He was embarrassed to think how much of his worry was divided between the fate of Russia and the fate of Fyodor, Count Rostov.

As he contemplated the future, Rostov was suddenly startled by a ray of light which struck his face on this cloudy day. A break had appeared in the clouds and a shaft of sunshine, after striking the golden dome of the Cathedral of St. Isaac of Dalmatia, had reflected in his direction. In some amazing way he realized how symbolic it was of his thoughts. The future was veiled and he must pierce that curtain and get a glimpse beyond. It did not matter the size of gap, for any knowledge would be invaluable.

That left only the method, and Rostov quickly realized what it must be. The Imperial German Staff must be penetrated, or perhaps information gained from the Kaiser's household. He could only think of one person capable of doing so in a very short time and it greatly saddened his heart. He would have to request his fiancée, the Countess Irina, to enter Berlin, for only she of all his contacts could adequately play the multi-played game of spy, counter-spy, and counter-counter-spy. She would hate him for using her, as he would hate himself, but the need of mother Russia was uppermost in his mind now, subordinating all other thoughts.

With new resolution, Rostov stepped out onto the ice and began to skate towards Irina, who had been gracefully gliding about before him, waiting for him to join her. Rostov tried to smile but gave up as he could only grimace. Perhaps this evening at Alexander's Palace in Tsarskoe Selo, the Tsar would read him a few of the jokes that the Grand Duke George had been so fond of telling when he and Nicholas were young. He would badly need cheering up after the conversation which was about to unfold.

Well-written, I thought, and it sounded well-researched, but Grams had tried something new by leaving the end somewhat vague, probably indicating that it would be continued. It looked powerful, though, and I began to wonder when she might appear again. Also, I wanted to say thanks for the help she had given me on the Physics 319 final a few weeks before.

I just wished she would try something a bit less disconcerting the next time she decided to show up.

(Captain Idaho-Lord Lycanthropy) You'd think if there was really a Turko-Russian alliance that we'd have done a bit better the first year. Only two builds between us and the Italian, while the Austrian gained.

(St. Petersburg-London) St. Petersburg may be open to 1902 assault, but just remember that you'll have to leave the North Sea open to the Germans. Think about it.

TRUSTWORTHY, LOYAL, CHEERFUL
FRIENDLY, COURTEOUS, KIND...."

(Marseilles-Europe) Anybody out there who will challenge me to a game of Chess? After all, if I'm too busy thinking about my next move, you wouldn't have to read all of this drivel. (Then again, nobody reads it anyway.)

(Burgandy-Turkey) I should have taken you up on the bet you offered. But the move caught me by surprise, too. Yes, things have changed.

(Picardy-Reilly) I enjoyed your press releases on "The Rat Alliance", too. As a matter of fact, I plagerised, errrrr, borrowed from them for my English class. Not bad for a potato farmer.

(Belgium-Indy) I propose that all postal workers between Indianapolis and Culver City be shot.

(Spain-Turkey) I still can't believe it! Art Fleming's nephew! Has Fritz Mondale asked you to run for Vice President yet?

(Portugal-Russia) Re: Issue #26, page 16, "He sighed in ecstasy as his lungs filled." Really, now, I thought a sigh involved the EXPULSION of air, not inhaling. Gee, could you teach me how to do that?

(Paris-Austria) I believe that somebody is VERY LUCKY that Russia didn't go to Vienna.

(Paris-Italy) I also believe that somebody is VERY LUCKY that Austria didn't order A TRI S F ADR-VEN.

(Paris-Paris) Then again, somebody is VERY LUCKY that Germany didn't go to Burgundy.

(Art Fleming's Nephew) And the answer is Lord Lycanthropy.

(Kleiman) What is it that the GM dreads to see in the press?

(Vienna-World) If there is a Moral Majority (which I doubt), there must be an Immoral Minority -- and it's good to see 52 of us here! (This one's for Andy!)

(Vienna-St. Pete) Keep your pests off my Buda! (Budapest, that is).

(Indy-St. Pete) He didn't really say that, did he?

(Vienna-Indy) Happy hacienda hunting!

(St. Petersburg) I was riding my bicycle to work early Friday morning, singing along with my Walkman-style stereo, "You see me now, a veteran/of a thousand psychic wars./My energy's spent at last/and my armor is des....." when suddenly I heard behind me a sound which I'd dreaded hearing for the past four years, a police siren.

I slowed down a bit and looked over my shoulder. Sure enough, a cop was motioning me to stop. Damn and double damn, just what I need to start my day off. I stopped, reaching into my backpack to turn off the Walkman as I dismounted my bicycle.

I looked up at the cop walking towards me. Now that was a surprise, the very first policewoman I'd seen in Idaho Falls doing something besides giving out parking tickets.

It didn't seem to matter much, though, for she quickly snarled, "Don't you know it's illegal to ride your bicycle on the sidewalk?"

I knew it; they'd finally gotten me. But I was ticked off enough that I said right back, "Yes, and my bicycle wouldn't survive if I tried riding it on the streets."

"Don't give me any smartass comments, you little creep. You're getting a ticket for this." She smiled wickedly as she opened her traffic violation booklet. I started wondering how big the fine would be.

"Look, lady. These streets aren't made for bicycle riding. I'd have my bike in the shop every week unless I rode it on the sidewalks," I protested loudly. Maybe she'd see my logic and back off a bit. After all, I was speaking God's truth as far as the streets of Idaho Falls were concerned. The only streets smooth enough for bicycle riding also had speed limits around forty.

"Stuff it, kid. Just give me your name and address." I got out my driver's license so I wouldn't have to say anything more. I was upset enough that I might have said something insulting if I'd opened my mouth.

"Great. Now sign this."

I did so and she gave me the ticket. I just stared as she returned to the police car and drove off. I always knew there was something about Idaho Falls that I didn't like, and it had popped up again. People who are incapable of listening to a reasonable argument. Just look at the people of the Second District had put in Congress for an example.

It was then that I noticed that the ticket she had given me seemed a little thick. Looking at it a little closer, I saw that it was not made out of any cardstock, but was actually a couple of sheets of normal-sized paper, folded so that they were the approximate size of a traffic ticket. What in the name of Ed Simbalist, I wondered.

I unfolded the papers, read the first few lines therein, and quickly I yelled after the distant police car, "Damn it, Grams. You've got a really sick sense of humor." For indeed, it had been my fairy godmother, having her little joke as she delivered a press release.

I looked down and read:

Piercing the Veil
by Grams

Fyodor Rostov stood on the banks of the Neva River, watching several young members of the nobility as they skated on the winter ice. His mind, however, did not comprehend what his eyes communicated to it. Rostov's thoughts were elsewhere as he contemplated the wars in Europe and mother Russia's singular lack of success.

The Austrian campaign was, of course, a gamble, and that had been understood from the start. It had come as no surprise then that no gains had been made there and that a small change in plans would have made no great difference. The future was much in (London) Mr. Phil honored the St. Petersburg army with the Trooper of the Year Award in ceremonies at Parliament today. The award, given for steadfast loyalty in the face of extreme provocation, was given to the garrison for its loyal support of the Russian Empire. Many have argued that Turkey's loyalty to Austria had earned the trophy, but Lord Redmond replied that wooden-headed dummies without imagination or ambition were ineligible.

The Metternich

(Moscow) It is a sin to believe evil of others, but it is seldom a mistake.

(Rome-Mecca) A holy war? You and I against the devil? Keep your eye on the original Senn! 'Tis your hand that stays the justice of God. His will be done.

(Paris) Le Creme Poof sailed as he thought of Sultan Swinean. The fool wallows in the mire when he could be enjoying the riches of Mother Russia. Well, let him whine and squirm. Soon we shall see a new dawn, a new way, a new allie! The Druids, the Devil and the Fool -- what a trinity they make.

The Covenant

(His Lordship((Turkey))-Mr. Phil) There was a bad army for Sevestapoo, That wouldn't do what is was told to, So when the Austrian said, Let's fight or we're dead, His Lordship said, "I got to!"

(St. Petersburg) Czar Philip announced that the northern fleets will take part in the upcoming Baltic Sea yacht races sponsored by Kaiser Cartier. While rumors persist of a German sneak attack on the Empire, the Czar dismissed such talk about our teutonic brothers. "Ich bien ien Berliner," said the Czar.

(The Balkans via Moscow) Confusion reigns supreme as the Great (and not so Great) powers thrust and parry over this rich area. Said Czar Philip, "There is room for all, that is, once we get rid of these sub-human Austrian maggots."

(Austria-Turkey) That stab cost you one center, want to try for another?

(Austria-Russia) I'm still alive and kicking and you've gained nothing. The more you attack me, the stronger Italy gets. Why don't you take your toys and go play up north where the grass is greener?

(Austria-England) Welcome Melinda. Are you prepared to receive Russia's wintery embrace? I'm sure he is eager to show his affection for your supply centers.

(Austria-Germany) Wake up Steve! There's a villian coming in your back door...

(England) The cold chill of night still lay upon the land when awareness came to her. "Awake, little one, you are needed." A white cloaked figure drifted away.

"Again?" She protested. "Where?"

"The Covenant," the white cloaked figure replied. "England." She studied the map then slammed a hand down on the table.

"Another losing situation! Look at this! You can't tell who's allied with who! Looks like everybody's hung England out to dry. Why can't I ever get a situation where I'm only 2 seasons away from a win? Why do I always get a losing proposition?"

As she was teleported to Whitehall, she heard the white cloaked figure's voice. "Because, little one, you're one of those suckers who are born every minute." Angrily the women stalked past the guards of Whitehall ignoring their quick salutes. As she stormed into the War Room, she flung her cloak across a filing cabinet and barked orders.

"Get me the latest dispatches and I mean ALL of them! Get me the latest intelligence from M15! And get this @#*^@^ tea outta here and bring me a decent cup of coffee!" As the aides scrambled to obey, she lit a cigar and blew a cloud of blue smoke towards the ceiling. A few seconds later, she began to grin and chuckled.

(London-Indy) Don't you just love a flashy entrance?

(London-Civilized World (I'm sure it's out there somewhere)) The new administration greets everyone else. Needless to say, I'm a little bewildered at all this confusion. If someone would enlighten me, I'd certainly appreciate it. Otherwise, I'm just going to blunder around in my own nasty fashion.

(Turkey) Fall becomes winter, and we know that winter will become spring.

(Indy-Turkey) How prophetic...

(Bulgaria) Lord Lycanthropy was nodding off when...oh, forget it.

(Indy) Amen.

The George Marshall

(Gascony-Indy) Where's the Diplomat? (Issue 3.27, that is.) I get paranoid enough due to lack of communication with the other players. Are you going to stop sending me stuff, too? Or is this the work of the mysterious Master of Chaos?

(Indy-Gascony) I would guess that the U.S. Post Awful has struck again. You should get #27 with this issue.

(Paris-Turkey) I think I know who proposed that NMR's be disallowed. So, is PakeI dead yet? This sounds like a job for....LORD LYCANTHROPY!!!!

(Brest-Indy) Suggest that you move N-KB3 vs. Nelson. Or does Reilly make your chess moves, too?

(Indy-Brest) Naw. I make the chess moves. That's why I'm doing better in the chess game than the Dip game.

Douglas MacArthur

(London-World) Since when is Britain an isle of ostrichized lepers? I mean, I like to get mail too.

(Russia-Everyone) I suppose all you masterfully cunning diplomats are sitting around out there saying, "Ha, ha! Look at that fool! How could he play Russia and get NO builds in 1901 (even if he is surrounded by a bunch of hopeless liars)?" Actually, I have no idea how I did it. If anyone has any suggestions on why I exert so much temptation on people to lie, cheat or otherwise embarrass me in some manner, please give me a call. When you get my number, just start laughing hysterically and my family will know exactly who it is that you want to talk to.

The Poor Richard

(Old Goat-Honey Bee) Even rabies would have been better than your present case of Hoof-in-Mouth!

(Russia-Austria) Whom so ever is a friend of my friend - he too is a friend. But a friend of my enemy is only a fiend - PERISH!

(JR-CB) Well, at least you made it to 1904. You must of have done something right.

(Serbia(via Russia)) Ever so quickly #99 snuck up to the shrine where the beautiful princess slept. Then quickly he placed the woody stake against the breast and struck it a mighty blow. Again and again he hammered the stake, until it had all be disappeared. He screamed at last, "If that doesn't kill you, it's only because you have no heart!"

(Moscow) #3 asked, "Graphics Display Panel on the Wall, what shall I do with my orders this fall?"

And the voice responds, "You cannot destroy all of your enemies, for they are two and strong! But you can destroy their allies, they won't last very long! A thrust here (Serbia blinks) and she will fall. A cut here (Kiel winks) and they won't be so tall. Any thing that hurts your enemies cannot be all wrong!"

(#3-Parsifal) If you beat me, it is nothing for I am not of any importance. But, if by some miracle I should best you, then I shall have earned the just rewards of fame and glory.

(Ice Queen-Quich Queen) I wouldn't do that or woody I? You pull my strings and I'll pull yours.

(Russia-Turkey) Well, how do you like those apples?

(To England, with love) ((from Russia, of course)) A SECRET alliance is hard to see and nobody knows but you and me. I won't tell until we win, unless you try to stab again.

(#3-Monseur Regards) They would have called it the French Channel if it was meant for you to go north!

(Bozo-Pasta Face) Thanks I needed that! For a moment there, I lost my mind and actually believed you had a brain!

(Austria-Turkey) Grab what you can - I meant that!

(Austria-France) What can I say, I owed the Turk!

(Austria-England) Good show. Nice move! Bravo! Give this stabber a standing ovation!

(Honey Bee-JR) How about we forget this game and move on to something better! Your place or mine?

(Austria-Germany) Feel free to move into Bohemia or Tyrolia - at this point, I'd rather support you into Trieste or Vienna than keep Pasta Face next to me! I'd rather cuddle up with you!

(Austria-Everyone) Please make it fast! Be merciful!

(Old Goat-Dottering Old English Dip) If you're going to admit your mind is made up, then I won't waste the postage - just to confuse you with the facts.

(JRB-Sultan) See how much fun you can have with your new neighbors.

(KGB-Germany) Having considered the evidence we find you guilty of aiding and abetting the enemy (indirectly through your lack of coorespondence). Therefore, until such time as you see fit to correspond, we shall consider your actions as hostile and detrimental to the greater glory of our illustrious nation.

(Warsaw) The military government is hereby subscribing all able-bodied citizens to form the new alshymers unit. This unit will be ready for our new spring offensive. Anyone who can't remember who or why we are fighting is here by promoted to squad leader. Any one who can't remember who our allies were supposed to be is promoted to commander-in-chief. All others are busted (more or less) like Kathy.

(JR-Pasta Face) At least you don't have egg on your face.

(#99-England) Ahh, come on, propose an uncensored press! Wiap.

(JR-Craig) May your teeth rot/May your smile crumble/When you take my dot/You're asking for a ruable.

(Lord Lycanthropy-BZHY) ((Guest Press)) This has got to be the most ancient game in hobby right now. You might consider renaming it "When the legends die...and the come back to life...though you wish they hadn't."

(Lord Lycanthropy-Strudel Face Byrne) ((Guest Press)) Just think, if you let someone who wears panty hose, someone who writes 'Clod' and someone who can't kill a three center Turkey in Covenant continue to beat up on you, we can give YOU the Pat Pake! award.

(Pat Pake! Award Custodian-Indy) ((Guest Press)) Lets start taking votes on this one. I nominate Byrne and Crosby for his performance in the Talleyrand.

(Indy-PPA Custodian) Maybe you better explain to everyone what the PPA is.

(Denmark-Kiel) A dog who barks at nothing. A hunter who shoots a waving tree branch. A boy who sees monsters in the shadows. Nightmares and hallucinations! Who do you think you're fighting anyway?

(Sweden-Serbia) Well, we've called each other it wrong once, haven't we?

(London-Rome) Leadership by example....Since Italy is committing conscious suicide and Germany is doing the same semi-consciously, we might as well all join in the fun.

(Parsifal-#3) Neat trick, playing both sides of the standoff. Next time, you be Germany and let Steve be Russia, OK?

(London-Sultan) It will be interesting to see how long you'll be willing to let the Queen Bee live and your chances die.

Bond press

(Italy) For Sale: Villa in northern Italy. Prime real estate. Warm location. Some fire and smoke damage. Presently occupied by French tarts but soon to be renovated in lace, beads, bells, baubles and other tasteless Turkish trash.

(Russia-Germany) Helloooooo? Are you still there, somewhere?

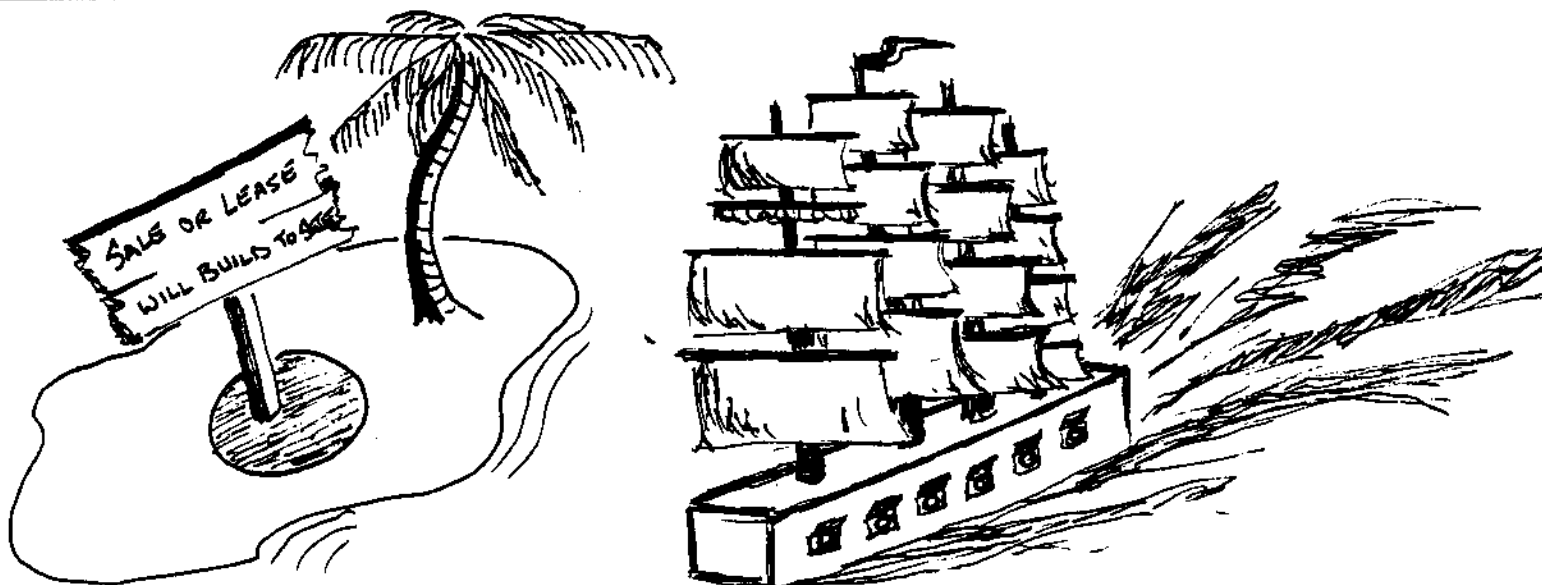

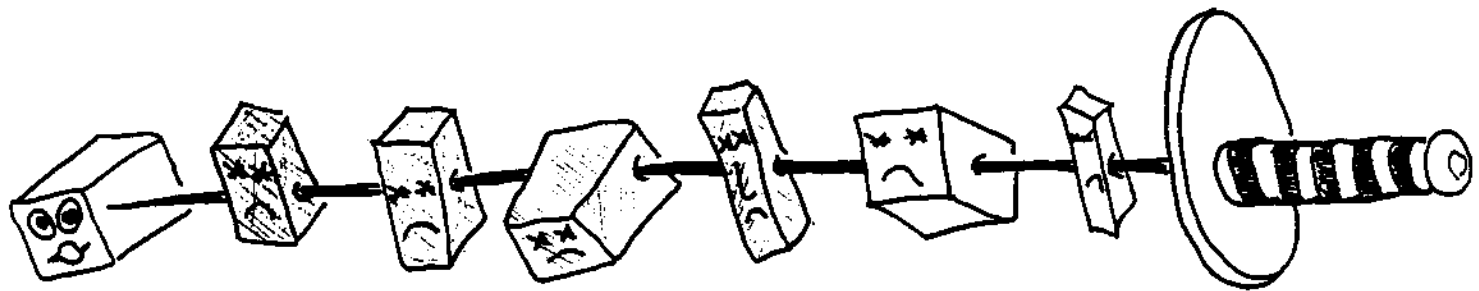

Bourse press

(IRA) Collapse of the Austrian empire is eminent - investors rush to retrieve what they can before the banks collapse. Ripple effect is guaranteed to shake up many other sound banks. Buy more gold, not guns!

(RM-Bourse) What a wonderful currency Turkish is!!!! I think we ought to give the person playing Turkey a kickback!

BUT, SENÖR ZORO, YOU PROMISED!
