

FINAL

THE PEACEFUL CONQUEST OF Hyper- Space

ALLAN B. CALHAMAR, the inventor of "Diplomacy," is at last marketing a new game, this one as different in concept from "Diplomacy" as that game was from the usual wargame, and yet as fascinating!

Hyper-Space is a two person game, of chance and skill, taking a half hour to one hour to play. It is, as far as I ((Mr. Calhamar speaking)) knew, the only game in production to employ a four-dimensional board (four, not three).

The players head exploration teams which are racing to discover the mountainous (presumably mineral-laden) parts of a topographically four-dimensional planet.

The map on which the game is played is different for each contest. The map's configuration is discovered by the players in the course of the game.

The set and box employ heavy cardboard throughout, 168 pieces per set, all one inch square, with good-looking surfaces laminated to both sides.

While Hyper-Space has appeared in a few stores in large population centers, the surest means of swift delivery is purchase from the designer. The game is $4.95, postpaid, from:

"... Our play-test indicates it to be an excellent general game..."
--Christopher Wagner, Editor, Strategy & Tactics

"...it is easy to understand, fast, but really quite fascinating... I urge people to get it..." -- Rod Walker, Editor, Erewhon

"...an engaging two player game... and a fascinating puzzle-solitaire for one..."

Valhalla #15, 22 July 1969, has been a long time coming, and will be an even longer time in coming again. About 15 months ago Chris Wagner of Strategy and Tactics and I embarked on an ambitious project -- a self-supporting diplomacy magazine. Of course, Valhalla was to serve other functions that just a Diplomacy fanzine. For one thing, Chris wanted to run a number of Reader Service departments that were just too bulky for S&T... things like opponents wanted listings, and a long running directory to aid wargamers in a given area to find compatriots. While these departments probably generated most of Val's appeal for the general wargamer, they were deadly dull to its editor. Typing five or six pages of listings which changed very little, every three weeks is a real bore. But it did serve a purpose... last month Valhalla finally picked up enough subscribers to become self-sufficient.

I had another purpose in agreeing to edit Valhalla. I thought that by reaching several hundred (I was optimistic) wargamers with a magazine that was about 50% Diplomacy, it would be possible to recruit more postal Diplomacy players. To that end I carried a blow-by-blow analysis of the moves in Val's only Diplomacy game, ran a listing of most of the current game openings in other Diplomacy magazines, and sold bundles of current Diplomacy magazines to all comers for 60¢. Sometimes, I gave them away.

Moreover, I reasoned that most A-H wargamers, even those accustomed to PBM play, would be discouraged by postal Diplomacy games that took two, three, or four years, and which ran 4 to 6 weeks between moves. I therefore began a series of games in Ragnarok which were streamlined as much as possible, which were moderately priced ($3 for the first game, $1 for succeeding games), and fast (bi-weekly). Some nine months after they began, six Rag games are in progress, several promise to end within four months, and several others are in preparation.

All in all I don't think things have gone too badly.

I am, however, in a position where my time is limited. For this reason there has been no issue of Valhalla for some months and for this reason, now that S&T have dropped their interests, I do not feel that I can afford the time that Valhalla entails. I am therefore folding it as a separate magazine. It will join Massif, Trantor, Orthanc and (soon) Jutland Jollies as a subzine of sTab.

This leaves me with some $70 in subscription money outstanding. I am therefore offering each subscriber a choice. He can take his subscription in sTabs, or he can have a refund. Now, while I think sTab is a reasonably good magazine, and others seem to like it too, I must point out that it is a Diplomacy magazine. I will have no room for the departments which have taken up so much space in Val. sTab does carry 6 Diplomacy games, a large letter column, and the rosters of all postal diplomacy games, as well as occasional other bits of madness. It has, in the last year, averaged a little over 17 pages per tri-weekly issue. But it is not a war-games magazine. Those who wish a refund in preference to sTab may return the enclosed form and they will receive their cash promptly. Those who wish to wait an issue or so before deciding are free to do so. Those who do not reply at all will receive sTab until their subs are expended.

I am sorry to be leaving you this way, but I assure you I have no choice in the matter. -- John Kening
