

WILD 'N' WOOLLY

Wild 'n' Woolly 1960

March 1, 1968

When I first came to Portland, I found that I had to work 7 days a week and bring home work for my wife to do at home. Shortly after that, I found myself engaged in a small war at the office (I'm always "battlin'" somebody, it seems) which grew more hectic as time went on. Then I developed this fever which still refuses to go away. About a month ago, when it got bad, I also got my 3rd set of teeth (but all in the same place, in miniature, just underneath a perfectly good tooth) which required some miserable surgery.

But now it's spring, birds are singing, children are laughing, armies are marching, and the fiscal year has been closed. What's more, after more than 3 years of publishing, Wilderwoolly Publications now owns its own Dittol! No more do we have to drive 30 miles and huddle over a 60 year old mimeo in the rain, hand-feeding one page at a time. My wife lets me publish right in my own living room!

(London) "Bill Our Way" has gone around France spreading his way of government, warning that any opposition will be crushed. He is at the moment, undecided, as to where he will run around next. He has expressed his admonition that no one challenge his control of the seas. "Bill Our Way" says, "Nation who think of getting richer, disappear quicker!"

(London) With the imminent end of the Great European War, the grim, tired, forces of his Majesty's Navy sailed for home ports and the loyal allied base in Portugal. Russia will dictate the terms and the battered English can do little more than accept.

One last effort is planned

(Constantinople) Good old Jim Dandy announced his appointment as head of the world wide playboy empire including the pleggiel clubs in each and every major city with their own membership dues.

As for Crown Prince Euglen, Jim Dandy commented, "Pine boy is quite like cut up. I had to put him out of my clubs because he kept cutting the bunny tails off the girls. I believe he still has political ambitions. Well, even Romney doesn't want Austria or Italy However, if the Crown prince wants to throw his hat in the ring, he might as well include his head, as he'd never miss it, anyway.
