Fall 1907

1966KH

(London) Government sources reveal that England is tired of the War and if everyone will leave her alone, she'll be quite happy. She wishes Russia every success in over-running the rest of Europe, especially France.

(Constantinople) World Traveling Playboy Jimmy Danny is here to-day to commemorate the unveiling of the greatest statue in the world. It is a giant harem-girl standing in the straits of the Bosphorus holding aloft a Torch in each hand. Both torches burn fuel oil continuously, "to light the way of all the oppressed peoples of the world to the haven of the Black Sea." It is also rumoured that an important government message may be broadcast today, possibly the expected Declaration of War against Italy, Austria, and Hungary.

The ruling allowing the Russian move Berlin to Trieste does not establish a precedent for any other game. You may have some comments about this ruling. I'll be glad to print them. The Russian orders were a bit scribbled and where he was trying to move the Army Vienna wasn't really clear.

Jim didn't bother writing an autobiography for us. If he did, he'd probably talk about the game and how he won it in spite of the Game-master's opposition.

Jim's parents are the quiet hard-working sort of people that everyone likes to call their best friends. They started out with very little and yet gave their children very much; not only patience and understanding but a comfortable home and a gracious standard of living that certainly must have required sacrifices in earlier years.

Until very recently, the Dygert's occupied a home on a hilltop in Walnut Knolls which was the loveliest home I've ever seen.

Of course, with everything so pleasant at home, the rest of the world is a vast litter strewn boiler factory occupied by drunks degenerates and dopes. In such a place, he must seek his Education, Recreation, and Diplomacy Playing. As a result, he spends most of his waking hours in a rage. If it were not for his powerful intellect controlling his temper and his small size, he would be a dangerous person to meet.

Anyway, he did win game 1966KN the hard way.

(Berlin) Well, this war is almost over, folks, and I'm not going to win . . . ag'in . . . as usual. But, who cares?
Now if only and will and us, we with more
BY THE WAY, doesn't

((W'n W only publishes family reading, the rest is censored.))

(Constantinople) Know, Austrian, the exquisite agony of defeat and doom! Know that we, your former allies, have arranged this doom! Savor the thought that had not thou been a treacherous, thou wouldst at this time enjoy great power, even unto the domination of Europe. Revel in agony in thy last hour.

(Paris) What are the up to now? First he heaves the ditto machine out the window and then he gets fantasies about conquering the East! Dygert, my boy, didn't anyone ever tell you that Alexander started in Macedonia, not in Rome! You can't get to Persia from Budapest without a brief stop for a bloody duel at Suffield Experimental Station.

Of course if Italy used Tuscany to Support the Tyrrhenian, then I'm going to have to take this all back. But I still think that when this war is finally over (like in about 1992) Italy will wish she'd kept her ditto machine in the house to hide under!

POSTMARK DEADLINE: Spring 1917 moves: July 18, 1968

THE RULES TO KALMAR'S OWN VARIANT 1 PERSONAL GAME

1. The player who first obtains 18 units on the board is declared the winner.
2. The Assistant Gamesmasters will make all retreats and builds wherein there is little or no choice involved. Players may send in Retreats and Builds, etc. to be used with their moves.
3. "moves" or "orders" which admit to more than one interpretation will be interpreted as a move from the first province mentioned to the second province mentioned.
4. Units which attack each other with equal support (if any) will exchange places.
5. A unit which attacks a given province or sea area, although it is dislodged by an attack from that province; still stands off any equally or less supported unit attempting to "follow in" to that province.
6. Players should pick their replacements early in the game so that the game need not be delayed if they should drop out.
7. Armies may give Support in adjacent sea areas and empty land provinces may be supported to resist invasion. (the empty province has no strength of its own so one Support is the same as one standing unit.)
8. A unit attempting to move may be Supported both in place and/or where it is attempting to move.
9. through 18. rules same as in regular KALMAR games which are pretty standard.

The game will be in KALMAR (which means that the actual game is played by correspondence and summarized for subscribers two moves at a time later on in KALMAR.)

Game fee is $4 but many of you already have games paid for. However, you must state your choice of country! (I don't believe indrawing lots.)

Yvonne is insisting on her own private room already. So, we're going to move again soon.
