1965KQ

(Rome) Italy declares War on Russia! We will accept only an unconditional surrender to our "retired farmers" in Galicia.

(Vienna) The French Third Army in Tyrolia is hereby notified that it is trespassing on private, national property, and that Rent will be Charged if it does not remove itself from Austrian soil within 24 hours. It will be required to pay rent of one hundred American dollars per man per day.

(Frankenstein Castle) Predictions here this year call for the downfall of all seven major European powers, but Italy is expected to fall first and farthest.

It should be noted that the Italian retreat order to Portugal was received nearly a month before the French retreat order. Retreats and Builds, just the same as moves, take place or attempt to take place all simultaneously, however, so Italy does not get Portugal so easily.

(Moscow) Das vertriebene polnische Heer zieht sich von Berlin nach Preussen zurueck. President and Great Glorious Creature Andrzej Sawiczewski today showed great unhappiness, sorrow, and misery over the latest military situations. "Oh _____," he cried, and threw up his hands. This was a bit unfortunate, because he had been carrying a cauldron of hot tamale sauce at the time.

John McCallum asks, now that I've read the rulebook, will I revise the Wild 'n Woolly decision to award the game only to the player who has gained control of a total of 18 supply centers to a ruling more comparable to the rulebook's "majority of units" rule. The answer is no. After a game has gone on for two or more years, what is the harm in going on for another month or so to require the winner to "prove" his win? Theoretically, it is possible for a player to gain a majority of units and be in such an awkward position that the other players can still put him out of the game.

Darling?
Yes?
Support me into Belgium?

JUNGLE

A player, (name withheld to protect the guilty), has suggested a game which might be good practice for Diplomacy. It is certainly faster. Seven or more players write their orders on little slips of paper (no game board is used). On each turn, each player may attack one player (by name) or defend from two players (by name). You may never attack and defend at the same time. When a player is attacked by someone that he is not defending from on that turn, he is eliminated. (When two players attack each other, they are both eliminated). When there are only 3 players left, you may defend from only one player. The game could often end in a draw, but it will surely make enemies and destroy friendships much faster than Diplomacy.

SPECIAL GAME FOR BEGINNERS

A special game will be published for friends of yours who have not played in Postal Diplomacy before. Each of the players who play in this beginners' game will get a free game in Wild 'n Wooly whenever they are ready to start in another game. They will be playing against different players in their second game, of course. I won't put the same people all together in another game. They have their choice of country for the beginners' game which will be at regular speed. They will have their choice of game speed and country in their free game.

This was Wild 'n Wooly, a Diplomacy newspaper, published each 9 days. If not the wildest or wooliest, this is at least the most esoteric of Diplomacy newspapers.
