Eng: Well, I finally voted yes on the A/T draw - Did Cathy?

I expected the Super Bowl to be a drag, so I went to Berkeley to spend a warm Sunday instead. I hedged my bet by taping the Super Bowl, but when it happened that my expectations were confirmed, I taped over it without watching. I heard a couple Raiders jokes lately. Their quarterback, Mark Wilson, is the subject of some criticism as well as both these jokes.

Did you hear the Raider's traded Mark Wilson to the CIA? He's the only man who can overthrow Kadafy.

Do you know what Mark Wilson and Billy Graham have in common? They are the only two men who can bring 50,000 people to their feet to shout "Jesus Christ".

EPILOGUE

I have seen a lot of movies lately. I took a business trip East last week and they had a movie channel in the room and I saw two movies on the plane. Besides that, my significant other and I went to three movies while a friend visited and my two girls and I saw a double feature. All this movie watching makes me an expert.

Of all the movie watching, I agree with Daf Langley's statement in Magus, the movie Enemy Mine is a perfect movie for Science Fiction fans. I have been an SF fan for more years than I care to admit. Alien was a perfect movie, and Enemy Mine ranks along with it. I enjoy the glimpse of possibilities that SF gives me. The word that comes to mind is "fancy" as in "It suits my fancy". SF allows me to abandon my grasp of my reality and examine other possible systems of reality. Although I never have a difficult time getting into the dream world of movies, I come away from "perfect" science fiction movies with a real sense of adventure and satisfaction. Enemy Mine did that for me. I recommend it for those whose ability to accept other realities is not an obstacle.
